HUNT SLAYERS OF OHIO YOUTH, 17

Find Shattered Powder Magazine In Mine Shaft

OFFICIALS DECLARE IT CAUSED BLAST

Discover Three Other Boxes Containing 500 Pounds of Explosives.

PUT BLAME ON CIGARETTE

Rescue Workers Narrowly Miss Death in Gigantic Debris Slide.

(By Associated Press)

ST. CLAIRSVILLE —A powder-magazine, blasted open and shattered, was found today in the Willow Grove mine where an explosion March 16 killed 72 miners.

The powder box was located near the scene of the explosion and company officials said it might have caused the blast or that it contributed to its destructiveness.

Three other powder boxes near the scene were found intact. Each box contained about 500 pounds of powder.

George Strain, director of the state department of industrial relations, with state and federal mine inspectors, immediately began an investigation.

Black powder, used for blasting coal and rock, was stored in boxes which, officials said, were of a new design and considered virtually accident-proof. The explosive cannot be detonated in the boxes unless the lids are open.

One theory advanced by a company spokesman was that a lighted cigaret might have set off the powder. Smoking was permitted in the Willow Grove mine and it is customary also in most eastern Ohio diggings, officials said.

At a congressional committee investigation of the disaster last week, company officials and state inspectors indicated they considered it highly improbable that a powder blast was responsible for the accident.

Two rescue workers narrowly missed death last night when a truck struck an old timber causing tons of debris to fall.

Henry Valentine, St. Clairsville Negro, was taken to a Martins Ferry hospital with internal injuries and a compound leg fracture. Joseph T. Kelly of Neffs suffered a dislocated shoulder and possible internal injuries. He was in a Bellaire hospital.

The men were nearly buried by the rock fall and were saved by companions.

Communist Cited by Probers

Refusing to tell what Communist party member assumed the name "Franklin D. Roosevelt" for his party alias, James H. Dolsen, Pittsburgh Communist, is shown, seated, before the Dies committee in Washington just before he was cited for contempt yesterday. If convicted he faces a possible minimum sentence of a year in jail. Robert Lynch, Dies committee investigator, is pictured showing Dolsen the "Red party card" made out to "Franklin D. Roosevelt" and found in Dolsen's possession.

Mill In Use For 106 Years Burns, Landmark Lost

TOLEDO — (U P) — The Pillod mill, 106-year-old grain enterprise at Grand Rapids, burned last night. It had been in use continuously since it was built.

The loss was estimated at $10,000. The mill, between the Maumee river and the old Miami canal, was built of native stone and timber without nails.

Three volunteer firemen were injured slightly. The cause of the fire had not been determined.

The mill was built in 1834 by Peter Manor, the first white settler in the area. It was built on a tract of land ceded to Manor by the U. S. government because of his friendship with the Indians in the territory. The timber in the mill was cut by hand and fitted together.

Burning of the mill removed one of the last vestiges of the province village as it was before a cholera plague nearly wiped it out in the 1840's. The old Catholic church and the Oberly homestead are still standing but the mill was the oldest of all.

ANOTHER JESS

Mayor Names Namesake of Ex-Champ to Boxing Board.

The Mansfield Boxing Commission will have a member whose name is closely identified with boxing history as the result of the appointment today of Jess Willard to fill the unexpired term of Frank May.

May, whose term runs through Dec. 31, 1941, resigned from the commission recently.

Willard, named by Mayor W. J. Locke, is a foreman at the Mansfield Tire and Rubber company, and has been interested in the sport for a number of years. His namesake, Jess Willard, was boxing champion of the world prior to 1919, losing the title to Jack Dempsey in Toledo that year.

Other members of the boxing commission are R. J. Nichols, Harold Bloodgood, William Lauer and John B. Miller.

Sun May Fire a New Barrage At Satellite Today

NEW YORK — (U P) — The sun may fire a new barrage today at a world still struggling to understand and recover from its Easter bombardment.

Examination of the "rash" on the surface of the sun indicated to some scientists that the effects of the 92,930,000 mile bombardment of its satellite, earth, may be felt for several days with the possibility of recurrence today.

All scientists were agreed that sun spots caused Sunday's damage to communication systems but none professed to know what caused the "solar cyclones" which brought the sun spots.

FINAL TRIBUTE PAID MRS. BLACK

Mistress of Raemelton House Eulogized for Culture and Independent Thought.

Funeral services were held at 3:30 p. m. today for Mrs. Frank E. Black who died from a stroke Sunday evening at her home, Marion avenue road.

Mrs Black was stricken at 4:30 p. m. after attending church services in the morning and entertaining guests for dinner. With her when she died were members of her family. Her death followed that of her husband, founder of the Ohio Brass company by two years and three months.

Last night the body was taken from the Finefrock funeral home to the library of Raemelton House, her home, and this morning was moved to the drawing room which was banked with flowers from friends and employes of the farm and of the Ohio Brass company. WOULD SLASH SCHOOL COSTS

Clevelander Proposes Dropping 366 Teachers as Saving.

CLEVELAND —(AP)— Member Thomas J. Martin has offered the Cleveland board of education an economy program, including dropping of 366 teachers, which he says would slash $1,082,000 from the budget.

The board, seeking to keep within its 1940 revenue of $14,183,058, hopes to slash $2,308,443 from original department requests. Martin's plan also would remove half of the clerks, scrap the school gardening program, increase the pupil-teacher ration by one pupil and give many teachers five periods more a week.

Spring's Just Around Corner; That's Weatherman's Promise

Elusive spring which has given Manstielders the cold shoulder for the past week, will be more like herself by the end of this week, bringing balmy weather and sunshine, the weatherman promised today.

Although the mercury dropped to a wintry five degrees above zero again last night, it soon started upward and by noon had climbed to 32 degrees.

Before warm weather comes in three or four days, however, there may be light snow or rain, forecasters said. They predicted cloudy skies and snow Wednesday, changing to rain by afternoon or night.

Temperatures were moderating today over most of the nation west of Ohio as the late season cold wave moved slowly eastward. Readings in Ohio today ranged from 21 at Cincinnati to five degrees at Mansfield. Cambridge reported eight above, Hayesville 12, and Cleveland 13.

The top reading yesterday was 26 degrees and the 24-hour average was 15.5, about 26 degrees below normal.

Sub-zero readings were gone from the nation's weather map today and the lowest temperature reported was four above zero at Grand Rapids, Mich.

It was much warmer in the west with Denver, Colo., reporting 75 yesterday afternoon, eight degrees warmer than Los Angeles.

BARE PLOT OF REVOLUTION IN BOLIVIA

Government Declares State of Siege at Capital, Wires Cut.

CADETS JOIN IN REBELLION

Fate of Army Chief Unknown as Military Takes Over Control of La Paz.

LA PAZ, Bolivia—(U P)—A state of siege was proclaimed throughout Bolivia today as the government mustered all available military resources to cope with a revolt plot among dissident factions of the army.

When word of the plot spread a regiment of Caribineros attached to the presidential palace and the Viacha garrison immediately pledged fidelity to President Gen. Carlos Quintanilla.

Drastic precautions were taken to keep all but authorized persons from the Plaza Murillo, on which the presidential palace fronts. Street car service in La Paz was restricted and the military took control of telephonic communications, cutting circuits in some cases.

The president and his cabinet conferred at the palace over the situation.

"Some troops have rebelled," Gen. Demetrio Ramos, minister of the interior, told the United Press at the presidential palace. "The fate of the chief of staff, Gen. Ichazo, is not known. It appears that cadets also are involved."

Ramos said that pending further news it was not known whether the revolutionaries had been checked, but he said that the government, backed by all available military strength, was prepared to repulse "any form of attack by rebels."

Bolivia went through a bloodless revolution on May 17, 1936, when the government of President Tejada was overthrown. The coup was led by Colonel German Busch, who was acting chief of staff of the army. He was supported by the country's three socialist parties.

A socialist and military junta was formed and Col. David Toro was selected provisional president.

There was a second bloodless coup on July 13, 1937, when Busch assumed the presidency after Toro's resignation. Busch died on Aug. 23, 1939, of a bullet wound said to have been self-inflicted. He (Continued on Page 2, Col. 2)

LORAIN — (N S) — Three Lorain firemen were recovering today from injuries received when their fire truck overturned in a collision with an automobile while they were hurrying through the downtown section to answer an alarm.

The injured firemen, Steven Szuhy, 25, Ben Meyers, 59, and Zannie Leshinsky, 32, all suffered back, hip and head injuries. They were taken to St. Joseph's hospital.

'Bazooka' Burns, Sued for $70,000, Says 'Guy's Crazy'

Middle-Aged Plaintiff Says Comedian Alienated His Wife's Affections, Asks Damages.

LOS ANGELES — A $70,000 false imprisonment suit involving allusions to love theft faced film and radio comedian Bob Burns and others today.

The middle-aged plaintiff, Daniel W. Hoge, civil engineer, charged he was abducted from his home in nearby Wilmington Dec. 29, 1938, forced to sign a denial that Burns had stolen the affections of his wife, Millie, and to sign a similar statement releasing Burns' studio, Paramount, from any claims.

Informed of the suit, Burns declared:

"I think the guy has lost his mind. I didn't have any more to do with his wife than you did."

Burns said, however, that Hoge threatened Paramount officials to file suit "about a year ago."

"Paramount lawyers went to the district attorney's office," the comedian asserted. "The district attorney's men or somebody brought Hoge downtown to find what it was all about. I wasn't there myself, but they told me he broke down and cried, saying there was nothing to it. Then he signed a paper admitting it."

Burns said Hoge later came to him twice and apologized. de- (Continued on Page 3, Col. 8)

TRAIN PLUNGES, FIREMAN KILLED

Locomotive Goes Over 12 Foot Embankment, Cars Derailed.

CRYSTAL LAKE, Ill.—(AP)—Pending further investigation, "a misplaced switch" was blamed today for the derailment of "the Viking," Northwestern road passenger train, and the resultant death of Fireman Carl Miller of Baraboo, Wis.

Railroad men said the train apparently ran through a switch used to shift trains from the main line to a spur during construction of a state highway underpass a quarter mile west of here.

The train was en route from Minneapolis to Chicago when the accident occurred yesterday afternoon. The locomotive plunged down a 12-foot embankment but the nine coaches, although derailed, remained upright.

Molotov's scheduled visit, after the meeting of the Soviet supreme council on March 29. Alexander Schwartzkov, Soviet ambassador to Berlin, is due to return from Moscow tonight.

Official quarters said nothing was known regarding a projected speech by the fuehrer explaining his Brenner pass meeting with Premier Mussolini, although rumors of such plans circulated in Berlin.

"It isn't the first tough break I've had. I'm getting used to them," Buckner said, declaring that he still feels that he has done nothing wrong and that no one has been defrauded. His medical report showed that he was suffering from angina pectoris, a heart ailment and it will be attached to his clemency petition, he said.

SHOWS GANG'S FEAR OF RING

Witness Tells of Murdering Victim 'In Self Defense.'

NEW YORK —(U.P.)— The underworld's fear of the Brooklyn borough gang which did a contract business in murder was disclosed today with the solving of Samuel Chioccoli's murder last November.

Chioccoli, it was developed, was a member of the murder gang, doing a side business as a bookmaker. Three men who set out to rob him didn't know of his "big time" connection until they had taken his money. They had not intended harming him, one confessed, but after they learned he was an underling of Happy Maione, one of the Brooklyn mob leaders, they decided to kill him in "self defense," to keep him from identifying them to Maione.

Joseph Caroselli, 25, gave the details of Chioccoli's murder and named George Dolney and Albert Gatti as his accomplices. The latter two are awaiting trial for two other murders.

The job of clearing up some 30 murders attributed directly or indirectly to "Murder, Inc.," the Brooklyn syndicate, and exposed in a series of gangsters' confessions in the past 10 days, had over- (Continued on Page 3, Col. 4)

AKRON SEEKS TO TAX BINGO, KENO

Salon Tries To Wring Revenue From 'Amusement' Games.

AKRON—(N S)—An ordinance to secure revenue from the city by taxing of bingo and keno games and similar amusements was being drafted today by first Assistant Law Director Harold L. Mull, according to Frank Waite, chairman of the Akron city council's finance committee.

Waite said that the operator of each of these games would be assessed a $25 monthly tax and a special one dollar tax for each day the game is operated.

The proposal was expected to arouse strong opposition, particularly from the Akron Ministerial association which has opposed similar measures in the past.

SHOTGUN WOUNDS FATAL

Officials Think Boy May Have Been Killed Because He 'Knew Too Much.'

(By Associated Press)

WEST UNION—State highway patrolmen, police and sheriff's deputies converged on this southwestern Ohio county today in search of two men who robbed a grocery-truck driver of $150, then killed a 17-year-old youth who, authorities said, "may have known too much."

Lieut. A. H. Bouton, in charge of the Wilmington patrol sub-station, said at least two patrolmen from Portsmouth, two from Georgetown and a half dozen deputies from Adams county (West Union) were en route to a spot near where an abandoned stolen automobile was found shortly after dawn.

John Baldwin, 17, was shot fatally last night and dumped from a car occupied by two other men a short time after William McKee, truck driver, reported that a trio had bound and gagged him at shotgun point.

A blood-stained car was found abandoned near a cemetery at nearby Manchester earlier today by Alma Stone, a farm hand, and the highway patrol theorized that its former occupants could not be far away. There was a report they were in hiding in a cornfield.

Bouton said description of the car corresponded to that of one stolen Friday night from S. P. Leary of Wilmington, although license tags had been changed. These, too, were found to have been stolen.

Sheriff George Baldridge reported that Baldwin's hat was found near the robbery scene and that examination of his body disclosed 11 shotgun slugs in the groin. The tip of one finger also had been shot away.

"We don't know what to think just yet," he added. "It may be that Baldwin knew too much. Maybe not. We hope to find out."

McKee could not identify Baldwin as one of the trio that robbed him.

FLEE FIRE

Score of Persons Driven From Lakewood Apartment.

CLEVELAND — (N S) — Damage was estimated at $10,000 today in a fire which drove more than a score of persons from a two-story business and apartment block in suburban Lakewood.

Bruce Preslan, 24, discovered the fire as he sat in a cafe on the ground floor of the building. He ran upstairs and roused his wife, Florence, 22, and his two brothers, Charles, 18, and Wallace, 16, who were sleeping in the couple's second-floor apartment.

Preslan and his wife managed to escape through the smoke-filled halls, but the two younger brothers were forced to climb out a window to the roof of an adjoining building from which they were rescued by firemen. Mrs. Lillian Folsom, who occupied the other apartment on the second floor, was not at home at the time.

Got a Quarter, Bike Riders? Looks Like You'll Be Licensed

Get your quarter ready, kids.

You may not need it right away, but under a proposal now being drafted in city council, it appears likely that Mansfield will have a bicycle licensing ordinance within a few weeks.

Sixth Ward Councilman Arthur L. Croak said today that he had asked City Solicitor Marion D. Ward to draft legislation providing for the licensing and regulating of bicycles. The measure will be presented at the April 2 meeting.

Under the proposed ordinance, the license would cost 25 cents, according to Croak who is having the law patterned after the Bucyrus bicycle ordinance.

The applicant would be required to go to police headquarters to have his wheel inspected. To qualify for a license the bicycle must have a headlight and taillight, both visible for a distance of 200 feet at night.

It must have a rear wheel brake and such other safety equipment as police deem necessary.

If the bike meets this test, then the driver will fill out two cards, giving his name and address and wheel number. A little yellow license tag is issued and sealed on the wheel. One of the cards is the license certificate and the other stays on file at police headquarters. That's how police will check stolen bicycles and parts.

The license is to be good for the duration of the bicycle. A transfer charge of 25 cents will be made in the event of a sale or the purchase of a new bicycle.

Living Today Makes Demands

By MME. QUI VIVE

Tell me, pretty one, are you a Girl Alive? If you are, you belong. Ideas of beauty change with the times and they change for the better. Your great-grandmother was a clinging vine, wheedled her old man when she wanted a new black silk dress for Sunday wear. Your grandmother thought that was pretty silly, decided to do something about it. She refused to be a wheedler. Maybe she got herself a college education or a job, or both, and stood on her own feet. Your mother votes, drives a motor car. In this evolution of the modern woman many vitalizing influences have come to the surface.

The baby doll type isn't so remote that she has been forgotten. Now and then we see an old girl who still believes that's the charm ticket. What the young man of today wants is a best birl who knows what she is talking about, who is responsive, who can get around. Women are interested in books, politics, the affairs of the universe, are more companionable than the soft little nitwits, no matter what any one says. Having intelligence does not mean absence of charm; far from it.

There's a better understanding about the need of mental hygiene, which forbids complaining, whining, brooding and having cat fits if you don't get everything you want.

* * *

Faces stay younger if life is interesting. Women who live in hotels, have nothing to do but play bridge, get pretty bored. Boredom acts upon the physical machine by slowing up circulation and the functions of the inner body, resulting in softened facial tissues and wrinkles.

Even dumb women must have an idea now about food values and the need of getting outdoor exercise. These subjects are thumped into their brains in newspapers and magazines and must take root. By living intensely, being on the little pink toes, one reaps many benefits. Not only dispositions are better, but teeth, complexions and digestions.

* * *

Look at the vast number of girls who are interested in outdoor sports — archery, swimming, golf, tennis, horse back riding, badminton. Fine! They're up and coming, find life zestful, and it's fun to be with them. No slumping around on cushions wondering what life's about, waiting for the telephone to summon them to a date.

What we must have these crazy days are strong bodies, live minds, active spirits, the will to work. We must expect hard bumps, disappointments and the usual dish up of daily irritations; they come into every life. But by being alert and working hand and hand with the white-robed lady Hope we can get along happily. And it is happiness that lights the eyes, puts the pretty blush upon the cheek and makes a woman stand among those that are known as the salt of the earth.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"Something has happened," he said, and the words were not a question.

Lillian wasted no words on assent.

"There's somebody hiding in the attic," she said swiftly. "I saw in a mirror the reflection of a hand and a pair of eyes from behind the curtains opposite the moth closet when we went up just now."

"Does he know you saw him?" There evidently was no doubt of the sex of the intruder in my father's mind.

"I don't think so," she replied. "I made an excuse to leave for a few minutes, and we came back to the second floor, bolting the attic door after us. He's safely trapped up there, whoever he is."

"It couldn't possibly be one of the boys," Dicky ventured tentatively.

"We just checked everybody in the house from Jim and Katie up and down," Lillian replied. "Everybody accounted for. I wondered if you might have a guard up in the attic."

"This proves I should have had," my father said caustically, "but I did not think of it."

"Could it be," Harry Underwood asked, "that the head of the troopers outside planted a man in there?"

"I don't think he'd do that without consulting me," my father said a bit stiffly, always a reaction of his when his authority is questioned. "But that is something very easy to determine. Richard, will you find out for me, please?"

"Right-o!" Dicky said, and went swiftly out of the room, returning after the briefest of intervals with the report that the troopers had not stationed a guard in the attic.

"Then," my father said, drawing a deep breath, "that means one of Leslie's gang in some way has gained access to the house. Blessings on your sharp eyes, my dear!"—he inclined his head to Lillian—"But for them Leslie would have had an inside man here with God knows what results."

"What's the matter with letting the 'capering cockroach' believe he still has an inside man?" Harry Underwood asked with a meaningful look at my father, while I made the mental comment that Jack Leslie long since had outgrown the contemptuous epithet Dicky once had bestowed upon him. "Cobra" better fitted him now.

"I think it can be done," the chief said, "but of course the first thing is to insure the taking of this intruder alive and virtually unharmed. And that is quite a problem. In the first place, by means of ladders and other devices, will it be possible to station a man outside every window of the attic?"

"Give me a minute!" Dicky said, and put his head in his hands for the interval he had asked.

"Yes, we can do that easily," he said when he had raised his head again.

"Good!" my father commented. "Now then, and don't think I'm planning to smash a fly with a sledge hammer—there may be more than one man up there, you know—how about tear gas?"

"I'm sure the troopers either have it on hand or can get it easily," Harry Underwood said.

"Then that leaves but one other question," my father continued, and this time he looked at me. "Is there not in the attic a speaking tube connected with some other room in the house?"

When brown sugar becomes lumpy or hard, give it a rolling-pin treatment. Or, if you store it in a covered fruit jar it will soften in most cases. Dampness causes the hardness, so keep your sugar away from cooking steam.

Men Cooks Favor These Dishes

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

HERE ARE some dishes favored by amateur men cooks. The beef steak pie is the favorite of a well-known writer who has become nearly as famous for his dinners as for his books. He also has worked out the creole lamb with vegetables. Men like savory dishes for the main course, together with a well-mixed salad and a tangy dressing. They like stews and meat pies and potatoes and for dessert, pie, cheese and fresh fruit.

Beef Steak Pie for six is made with two pounds round steak, one and one-half cups sliced onion, one-fourth cup fat, two teaspoons salt, one-eighth teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, three tablespoons chopped parsley, two tablespoons flour, two and one-half cups water, two cups diced, raw potatoes, one recipe all bran pastry. Cut meat into one-inch cubes, add onion and brown in fat. Stir in seasonings, parsley and flour; mix well. Add water slowly, stirring constantly. Add potatoes; cover and simmer for about 30 minutes. Pour into greased eight and one-half-inch casserole. Cover with pastry rolled one-fourth-inch thick. Prick with fork to show wedge-shaped pieces. Bake in 450 degrees F. oven about 20 minutes.

For pastry use one-fourth cup bran, one and one-half cups flour, one-half teaspoon salt, one-fourth cup shortening, about four tablespoons cold water. Roll bran until fine; combine with flour and salt. Cut in shortening. Add water, a little at a time, until dough is moist enough to hold together. Roll out on lightly-floured board.

Lamb and Vegetables.

Creole Lamb and Vegetables to the tune of six portions is made with one and one-half pounds boned shoulder of lamb, one clove minced garlic, one and one-half cups sliced onions, three tablespoons butter or bacon fat, one and one-half teaspoons salt, one-eighth teaspoon black pepper, two cups boiling water, one and one-half cups each green beans and celery, both cut in one-inch pieces; one cup chili sauce, two tablespoons flour and three cups cooked rice. Cube lamb and then saute with garlic and onions in fat until browned. Add salt, pepper and water. Cover tightly and simmer slowly for one hour. Add beans and celery and more water if necessary. Cover and simmer for 45 minutes longer. Add chili sauce. Rub flour and small amount of cold water to a smooth paste. Add to meat mixture and cook for five minutes longer. Serve over hot, steamed rice.

Tasty Pie.

Banana Butterscotch Pie is made with three-fourths cup firmly-packed brown sugar, five tablespoons flour, one-half teaspoon salt, two cups milk, two egg yolks (slightly beaten), two tablespoons butter, one-half teaspoon vanilla extract, three ripe, sliced bananas and one baked nine-inch pie shell. Mix together sugar, flour and salt in top of double boiler. Add milk slowly, mixing thoroughly. Cook over rapidly-boiling water until well thickened, stirring constantly. Cook 10 minutes longer, stirring now and then. Stir small amount of hot mixture into egg yolks; then pour back into remaining hot mixture, while beating vigorously. Cook one minute longer. Remove from heat and add butter and vanilla. Cool. Place alternate layers of filling and banana in pie shell. Top with meringue or sweetened cream.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, March 27.

AN EXCITING day, with swift moving events transpiring in all departments of life, is forecast by the lunar and mutual aspects. It is probable that the adventurous and high-tensioned occurrences may be experienced in the realm of the emotions, romantic attachments or love life, where tempest, jealousy, passion and violence are likely to burst all bonds of restraint and prudence. In business impetuosity, strife and aggressiveness may prove detrimental, whereas calmness, consideration and subdued handling would be profitable.

Those whose birthday it is are on the brink of a year of high-pressure experiences, with all the energies and faculties under tension and stress to a perilous degree. Romance, emotional urges and all intimate expressions are subject to distress and disturbance because of impulsive and reckless behavior. Business also suffers from want of restraint, cool judgment and discreet management.

A child born on this day may be active, energetic, aggressive, original and sagacious, with tendencies toward jealousy and vindictiveness, unless given early discipline. It may have a softer side, social, diplomatic and friendly.

If you're going to broil or bake fruits to serve as meat garnishes, use some of the meat drippings for basting the fruits. The drippings not only help brown the fruit, but also give it extra flavor.

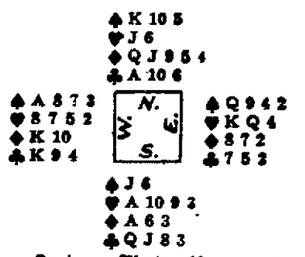
"The Authority on Authorities"

IT LOOKS DIFFERENT

AN ABSOLUTELY correct and sound play by your partner may look like a bad one from your side of the table. Remember, he gets a different view of the situation, sees some things which you do not, and cannot see some of the things which you do. If you feel prone to upbraid him for what he has done, just pause a bit first and see if you would not have done exactly the same in his position.



(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

West	North	East	South
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ♥
Pass	2 ♦	Pass	2 NT
Pass	3 NT

Just notice here, incidentally, that there were two chances North would answer the heart bid with spades—if either the West or East hand was held by North—against one chance he would bid diamonds.

When West led his spade 3, dummy playing low, East played the 9 and the J won. Then came the club Q to the K and A, the diamond Q to the K, the spade A and K, then four more diamonds, three more clubs and the heart A, the declarer making two overtricks.

West pointed out that, if East had played the Q on the first trick and returned a spade to the A, the K would then have been knocked out. When West later won with the diamond K, he could have cashed the thirteenth spade, holding declarer to a bare game.

Then East answered. The bidding certainly made it sound as if South had the spade A, and West therefore nothing higher than the J at best. If this was so, the Q play would have enabled declarer to get three tricks in the suit, finessing the 10 against the J, whereas holding up the Q would have limited the declarer to two tricks in the suit. East made the correct play, even though it didn't work. In other words, as the doctors say, "The operation was successful, but the patient died."

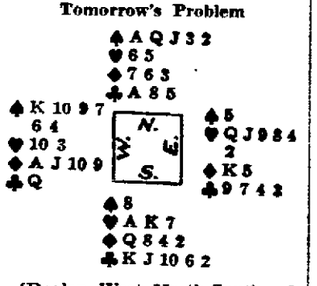
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: West. North-South vulnerable.)

If West leads the 10 of the heart suit which East had bid, South lets East win it and return another heart, how should South plan to try for 3-No Trumps?

Help Choose Career

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS Ph. D.

EVERY year, in more and more places, high schools are graduating students in January or February. A good many thousand youths were graduated recently. Few of them will find jobs, and those who plan to go to college may have to wait till fall.

Most of those graduating from high school in the middle of the school year should go back to high school till June. Some wishing to do so may have to pay a small tuition, but this will be good investment for those who can scrape together the money. Fortunate are the communities where this post-graduate work is provided by the public at no charge. Still more fortunate are the progressive communities which provide two years of junior college free or with very small tuition.

In some school communities students who could graduate in February are allowed to spread their work over the whole year. Most could profit from doing so. They could take extra courses, such as typing, which would be especially valuable if they go to college; typing often comes in handy for most youths. They also could devote more time to extra-curricular activities.

Spread Out Work.

Students who entered high school last February ought to be encouraged now to spread out their courses so as to graduate a half year later than the normal time. The dull student will need this extra time; the brighter student could profit from it, enjoying better mental health. The nervous strain upon almost any high school student today is pretty severe.

Parents whose children are now in any year below the senior year should plan with these youths and their teachers, advisers or principal their program, not only for the fall semester, but in general, also for the remainder of their high school education. This planning will take into account a life plan for the youth, the vocation or vocations he has in mind—first choice, second choice third choice. Experience of recent years has taught that it is wise not to limit the vocations to one choice, as a rule.

Let Child Choose.

Those high school seniors hoping to go to college should be planning now to this end, if they have not already done so.

And let us hope that parents will not presume to command the child what life work he shall enter. Let them study this child, his interests, aptitudes and school success in co-operation with the school; also study with the child the various vocations, their nature, needs and possibilities. At best it won't be easy to lead the child to choose wisely.

There are some good books on vocations and how to prepare for them; also some good books on choosing a college, preparing for college and succeeding at college. I wish many parents as well as youths would read these books, which should be found in the public library. If you want a selected list of either or both groups, write me in care of this paper, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

Solving Parent Problems.

Q. What do you consider the outstanding single contributor to crime in the United States?

A. The superstition that young children merely should be reasoned with, but never spanked or even restrained, lest their personalities be warped.

Hints For Housewives

You can save yourself the trouble of ironing curtains if you hang them on the rods while they're wet. Slip curtain rods in the bottom hems as a weight, and they'll dry straight.

A cotton flannel bag slipped over a broom is a convenient arrangement for brushing down walls. A bag will stay in place much better than a cloth. The bag must be kept clean to prevent wall streaking.

Men's and boy's shirts will last longer if the neck bands and cuffs are rubbed with soap and then left for 30 minutes or so before laundering. The dirt will be loosened so they will require less rubbing.

FIGHT FOR LOVE + + + + + + +

CHAPTER XXIX

"Nina and Bob just happened to run into Jennifer and this man with whom she has been traveling abroad," Milton continued. "Their testimony would be sufficient evidence for a divorce but I don't want my private affairs blasted all over the front page. It will be better for Jennifer to get it."

"Suppose she refuses?" Star asked, remembering Jennifer's threat.

"She won't have any choice about it. I've already cabled her that I'm coming to Paris—I wish I never had to see her again."

"Must you go?"

"It takes so long to write letters back and forth and it isn't the kind of thing we can discuss by cabling."

"I'm afraid of Mrs. Wood," Star admitted. "If she doesn't want a divorce, she may find some way to prevent it even yet."

"She can't," he said grimly. "I don't think she'll try. After all, she knows that Nina and Bob saw her. She probably thinks that's the reason I'm sailing."

* * *

It was still very complicated, Star decided, but so long as he loved her, so long as there was any hope at all she could be patient.

"We'd better go home," she suggested. "Mrs. Lambert will be worried about me as I told Mrs. Epperson I was just going for a walk."

Milton rose and took her hands.

"You'll wait for me, darling?" Give me a chance to straighten things out in a civilized way?"

"You know I will."

"I still can't believe that you are really in love with a man like me," he confessed. "You are so young and lovely. I am so much older and so disillusioned."

"You're hurt," she said gently. "But at heart you will always be an idealist. In some ways I am older even than you. You see I've never had any one to believe in except myself. I haven't any illusions."

"I'll make it up to you, Star. We'll be happy together."

"We'll probably have plenty of adjustments to make," she reminded him "but nothing can ever alter the fact that we love each other."

"Nothing," he answered.

He did not go in when they reached Nina's. Star ran upstairs, calling out, "Mrs. Lambert, where are you?"

Nina answered from the writing-room. She looked as if she had been crying.

"Well, where have you been?" she began, but Star did not give her time to say more. Putting her arms about Nina's neck, she cried, "You darling! How can I ever thank you?"

The writer said dryly. "Obviously you've seen Milton — but where?"

"At his boat in the yacht harbor," the girl answered. "Oh, Mrs. Lambert, I am so happy! I think you are the most wonderful person in the world!"

"Sit down and tell me about it," Nina answered. "Here I thought I would have something to tell you and Milton doesn't even let me do that."

* * *

Star was too excited to be quiet. She paced the floor as she explained how she had gone to say farewell to the boat on which they had spent so many happy hours. Adding that it was in the yacht harbor where Milton discovered her after she had left Nina.

Nina sighed. "You didn't tell me that before. But yes, it would be like that."

Star imagined that Nina was blaming herself for the fact that Milton had fallen in love with her secretary but Star knew it couldn't have happened otherwise. All her life had led up to this point.

It was late when the two women said good night and later still before Star slept, but she awakened early in the morning by Mrs. Epperson knocking at her door.

"Telephone for you, Miss Bright. It's Mr. Wood and he says it's important."

Star did not wait for a dressing gown. Thrusting her feet into the mules beneath her bed, she ran downstairs. What had happened now? Milton would never have awakened her without a good reason. She prayed frantically, "Oh, God, please don't let anything go wrong."

His voice was quietly excited but happy.

"Sorry to dig you out so early but I had to tell you. I've just had a cablegram from Jennifer asking me not to come to Paris. She is suing me for a divorce."

Star's heart was beating so wildly she could not answer.

"What's the matter?" he asked anxiously. "Are you there."

She said faintly, "Yes, darling!"

"Well, aren't you glad?" he asked, disappointed in her lack of enthusiasm.

"Glad!" she repeated and began to cry.

"Hold everything," Milton shouted. "I'm coming right out."

* * *

She had not cried when fate had dealt her most cruel blows but now when her heart's desire was coming true she could not bear it.

"It's so wonderful I simply can't believe it," she explained to Nina who had rushed to the head of the stairs.

"You'd better get dressed," Nina advised. "If I know Milton he'll be here in five minutes. And, Star, tell Mrs. Epperson to set the table for three. He'll have breakfast with us, of course."

"I never heard of such goings on," Mrs. Epperson objected. "As if it weren't crazy enough to call up at seven in the morning, he has to come busting out here. . . that woman and her ideas . . ."

"This is my fault," Star said, smiling through her tears. "I'm going to marry him, Mrs. Epperson."

"You're going to marry Milton Wood?" gasped the housekeeper. "Well, for land sakes, what are you crying for then?"

"Because I'm so happy," Star explained, smiling through her tears.

"Well, if you ask me, it's a good thing you're leaving this house," the other said. "You were a sensible girl when you came here but you've been different lately. You're getting more like her all the time."

* * *

Star laughed and ran upstairs to dress. She was just ready when Milton arrived. She heard the bell and Mrs. Epperson answering it. Then his voice from the foot of the stairway, Star Bright, where are you?"

"Coming," she answered and ran down to be folded in his arms and kissed under the approving gaze of Mrs. Epperson. This was something the housekeeper could understand. Love was enough to make the sanest behave peculiarly, but for Mrs. Lambert there was no such excuse, she decided, hurrying back to the kitchen.

The breakfast she served was her tribute to Cupid. Never had waffles been so light and delicately brown, never had bacon been so crisply delicious. The irony of it was that only Nina appreciated it. The other two seemed to be unconscious of what they ate, Nina, who was supposed to be on a diet, thought dolefully, "I may as well eat. What have I go to lose?"

Jessel, Showgirl Romance Just Publicity Stunt?

George C. Gourley

Lois Andrews

Is it or isn't it romance between George Jessel, 42-year-old radio entertainer, and Lois Andrews, 16-year-old showgirl? While both profess love for each other and announce they will be married. A radio announcer claimed it is a publicity stunt. Meanwhile, George C. Gourley, the girl's father, told newsmen in Los Angeles, where he is a private detective, that if Jessel wants to marry my daughter, "Let him come out to talk with me."

GENERAL FUND SHOWS BALANCE

City Has $6,727 on Hand After Receipt of Sales Tax.

The city's general fund which has been figured with red ink for the past month showed a balance of $6,727 today.

A $3,966 deficit was wiped out yesterday with the receipt of $10,693 in prepaid sales tax money from the state, City Auditor Paul L. Kelley said. It was the first distribution made to the city this year and is anticipated funds budgetted for operating purposes, he said.

It is expected that the general fund will be bolstered by approximately $40,000 from the current real estate tax collection which is scheduled to close next month.

REVIVAL OPENS

A two-week revival service will open at Christ Gospel Mission Wednesday night, with special speakers.

Rev. D. M. Miller, Butler, will preach at the first service and Rev. Paul Robinson, Senecaville, formerly of Butler, will preach Friday night.

Services will be held each evening, starting at 7:30. Special music has been arranged, according to J. B. Maxwell, superintendent of the mission.

HITS NEW PEAK

Enumerators Say Alaska's Nose Count Heads for New Record.

WASHINGTON —(AP)—Enumerators who have been counting noses in Alaska say the prospects are for a new population peak in the territory.

Secretary Hopkins announced yesterday that census returns from 39 of the 49 districts in Alaska recorded a population increase of 30 per cent over 1929 with indications that the total for the territory would exceed the high level of 64,356 in 1910. By 1929 the population had dropped to 59,278.

THEATERS

The Hardy family had better look to its laurels because there's another family in the movies that's vying seriously for the honor of being the nation's No. 1 screen family. It's the Bear family, Mamma, Papa and Baby Bear, and they're cartoon characters. The Bears made their debut in "Goldilocks and the Three Bears," and met such good reception that the producers have made a sequel," The Bear Family." This cartoon is something of a departure from the normal type in that the characters are drawn right in front of the audience. . . .

* * *

Rebuilt City of Virginia.

Details were worked out to the most minute technicalities in "Virginia City," which is showing at the Ohio theater. Carpenters were hired to rebuild entire streets of the gold-rush town from data gathered in months of research. Research had also uncovered slang in vogue at the time and essential in recapturing the spirit of the mining center. Miriam Hopkins and Errol Flynn play the leading roles in this story of the last stages of the Civil war.

* * *

Tarkington's Story.

"Seventeen," Booth Tarkington's immortal story of young love—a book read and loved by millions—has been filmed and will open at the Madison theater Wednesday. Jackie Cooper and Betty Field play the leading romantic roles. This is a hilarious picture of the trials of puppy love, its sharp understanding of typical American youth and its exciting presentation of the drama of growing up. The co-feature will be "Lambeth Walk" with Sally Gray and Lupino Lane heading the cast.

* * *

Pulitzer Prize Play.

One of the outstanding motion pictures of the season is "The Old Maid," starring Bette Davis which opens Wednesday at the Ritz theater. Adapted from the famous stage play by Zoe Adkins, it was awarded the Pulitzer prize award as the best play in 1935, after which it was made into a movie. Other members of the cast are Miriam Hopkins and George Brent. The co-feature is "Inspector Hornleight on Holiday," with Gordon Harker and Alastair Sim in the cast.

* * *

Marital Trouble.

Focussing the dramatic spotlight on a modern marital problem "Married and In Love" brings a foursome of well known actors to the screen at the Park theater. Alan Marshall and Barbara Read are one of the couples and Patric Knowles and Helen Vinson comprise the other pair. How airplanes are hijacked by organized mobs of former rum runners and the stolen machines sold to a foreign nation for war use, is one of the many interesting incidents which occur in "Mercy Plane," the second feature.

* * *

Lives of Everyday Folks.

"Let Us Live" is a story of plain, everyday people, innocent people, suddenly cast in the role of murderers. Maureen O'Sullivan, Henry Fonda and Ralph Bellamy are the principals in the human drama which is showing at the Majestic theater. The three Marx Bros. invade the world of the Big Top for their riot of merriment and are assisted by a strange cast assembled for a carnival of comedy.

BILLS GO OUT

8,500 to Get Sewer and Water Statements in Next Week.

Approximately 8,500 water customers on the west side of Main street will receive their sewer rental bills along with water bills next Monday, Fred E. Lingafelter, secretary of the water, sewer and garbage department, said today.

The statements totaling approximately $52,000 will be placed in the mails Friday and Saturday. Payments are due at the office of the water department at City hall between April 1 and April 15.

Of the total billing, $38,200 is for water statements while sewer rental charges amount to about $13,800, Lingafelter said.

The billing, which is an increase of $2,000 over a year ago, shows an increase of about 1,000 customers in the water service.

SUNDAY ROASTS JINXED

PITTSBURG, Cal. —(U.P.)— Mr. and Mrs. Howard Blincoe would like to know how to meet their meat problems. One week-end it was the roast that burned in the oven. The next week-end, Blincoe had just purchased a $1.50 leg of lamb for the Sunday dinner, turned around for an instant to chat with an acquaintance, and presto, it was gone.

AUSTRALIA SPEEDS TRAINS

CANBERRA, Australia —(U.P.)— Railway connections have been completed that makes it possible to cross Australia by rail from Sydney to Perth in 3½ days. The distance is 2,700 miles

There's a Good Reason You're Constipated!

When there's something wrong with you, the first rule is, get at the cause. If you are constipated, don't endure it first and "cure" it afterward. Find out what's giving you the trouble.

Chances are it's simple if you eat the super-refined foods most people do: meat, white bread, potatoes. It's likely you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If this is your trouble, you should eat a natural "bulk" producing food—such a one as the crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal, Kellogg's All-Bran. Eat it often, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

INDUSTRY OPENS DRIVE AIMED TO CURB SICKNESS

Movement Started to Prevent Losses Due to Illness of Plant Employes.

(By Associated Press)

PITTSBURGH — A movement paralleling the safety first campaign, but timed instead at sickness, has been launched in a cross-section of American industry, it has been announced.

The air hygiene foundation reported it had undertaken the study in conjunction with the United States Public Health service and the American Association of Industrial Physicians and Surgeons.

The purpose of the project is to eliminate some of the causes of what the foundation calls "sick absenteeism"—the absence of industrial workers due to sickness that cost American workmen and industry hundreds of millions of dollars annually.

Strangely, enough, preliminary studies have shown that it is more expensive for the employer than for the employe when the experienced worker is ill at home.

The foundation estimates there are 15,000,000 persons employed in heavy industry and that the annual average loss due to sickness and injury is eight days plus for men and 12 days plus for women.

On that basis, assuming that all 15,000,000 workers are men, "sick absenteeism" would cost heavy industry about $900,000,000 annually, a total arrived at by multiplying the 120,000,000 work days lost per year by $7.50 which equals one and one-half times the minimum daily wage. Stressing that these figures are estimates, the foundation said they were the best available.

200 To Co-Operate.

The study by the three agencies will be made, at the beginning, in co-operation with the 200 industries which are members of the foundation. Scattered across the nation, they are representative of American industry.

The foundation cites as indicative of the staggering sum sickness costs employers each year the report prepared in 1936 by Dean K. Brundage of the U. S. public health service. Brundage said that in the absence of a detailed study of these costs," reliable estimates cannot be presented," but continued:

"It may be assured, however, that the cost to the employer is at least 1½ times the amount of the daily wage when experienced employes are incapacitated by sickness."

Modest Schoolgirl Gets Permit for a Private Shower

LOS ANGELES (AP)— Modest 16-year-old Joan Lawrence who objected to taking group shower baths with other Alhambra high school girls, has been told she may have a private bathroom all her own.

Attorney W. B. McKesson, representing the school board, advanced that plan in an effort to reach a compromise with parents of the girl, who charged in their "rights of privacy" suit against the school board that bathing in the presence of other girls was dangerous to morals.

McKesson said Joan would be given access to any of five private shower stalls now available at the school and added that half a dozen others would be added.

The plan was transmitted to the girl's parents through their attorney.

Feller Takes Hill Against Cards Today

Indians Hop Back Into Winning Form By Scoring a 3 to 1 Decision Over Phillies.

FORT MYERS, Fla.—(INS)—Bob Feller was scheduled to take the mound against the St. Louis Cardinals, the team he faced in his startling debut in an exhibition game in 1936, as the Cleveland Indians traveled to St. Petersburg to meet the Cards today.

Manager Oscar Vitt was in a considerably more cheerful mood as the Tribe journeyed to St. Petersburg, for the Indians showed him yesterday that they really could play baseball by defeating the Philadelphia Phillies, 3 to 1, in a well played 12-inning game. In recent games the Tribesmen had exhibited a disheartening brand of play in the field, on the pitching mound and at bat.

* * *

The game with the Phillies was in sharp contrast, however, as Ray Mack and Russ Peters between them handled 20 chances in the field without an error.

* * *

Don Pulford, a promising rookie, hurled the first four innings for the Tribe, allowing only one hit, issuing a single base on balls and allowing no Philly to reach second base Harry Eisenstat allowed the lone Philadelphia run during his five-inning stay on the mound when First Baseman Gus Suhr poled a long homer.

Cal Dorsett pitched the final three frames and held the Phillies to two hits.

Against Kirby Higbe, the Indians were helpless, but tied the score in the seventh with Clyde Smoll on the mound for the National leaguers.

HONORED AT MEETING

NEW PHILADELPHIA—(U.P.)—The New Philadelphia high school basketball team which won the state class A schoolboy title this winter was honored last night by a crowd of 800 fans at an appreciation meeting.

Bowlers Hit High Scores In Tourney

Totals Posted in Three Events Top List.

DETROIT — (U.P.) — A check of last year's scores in the American bowling congress revealed today that totals already posted in the two-man, singles, and all-events in the 1940 classic are unusually high for only the fourth week of competition.

* * *

The five-man tabulations, however, are vulnerable to many alterations. Chicago Ambrosia, leading quintet, would have finished 100th last year with its 2,922 total. Eddie Zajac and Jimmy Ryan's top mark of 1,265 in the doubles was the 43rd spot in 1939 and Marty Cassio's high of 725 would have taken runner's up money. Zajac's 1,943 in the all-events was worth 10th place last year.

* * *

Most of the substantial scoring in the minor events has been posted by the comparatively few star bowlers among the horde of 2,000 booster teams which have occupied the alleys so far.

Ed Cieslinski, Buffalo, went into third in the all-events yesterday with 1,881, the most important change of the day. His 633, with John Miller's 576, reached ninth spot in the doubles.

Teams from the Cincinnati area dominated the "mid-night" firing. Haller Grocery, Cincinnati, with a 2,809 nosed out the Eckhardt and Becker team of the Detroit Classic league which had 2,783. Kerns Recreation of Newport, Ky., posted 2,620 with a series of 925-826-869.

Vonderhaar and Stetter Undertakers of Newport rolled 800-898-897 for 2,595. Kerns' team was composed of Leinenger, who bowled 528; Hungler, 475, Kern, 492, Hartman, 525; and Rahle, 601. Vonderhaar and Stetter's five were Joerg, 521; Warren, 508; Rothfuss, 495, Weger, 493; and Doyle, 578.

ELEVEN QUINTETS OPEN LOUDONVILLE CAGE MEET

The Loudonville amateur independent basketball tournament opens in the Loudonville high gym at 6:30 p. m. Wednesday with 11 quintets fighting for the championship. Garber Printers, Ashland Merchants and the Myers Pumps represent Ashland in the meet, while Galion's lone entry is the Bertram's confectioners. The Flexible Clippers of Loudonville will attempt to keep the title in their home town

HOLDS ATHLETIC BANQUET

Loudonville high school will stage its athletic banquet in the school cafeteria Friday night. Paul Brown, Massillon high football and basketball coach, is the principal speaker.

Kiefer Claims New Backstroke Record

CHICAGO—(AP)—Adolph Kiefer claimed a new world backstroke record today—57.2 seconds for 100 yards

* * *

The Chicago swimmer churned the waters of the Chicago Towers club pool in that time last night on the first leg of a 300 yards medley relay.

* * *

The time bettered his own recognized world record of 58.2 seconds and the American record of 57.8 seconds he established three years ago but which was never accepted as a world standard.

PHILADELPHIA—Cal Cagni (NY), New York, outpointed Milt Aron, 150, Chicago (10).

Close Play at First Base

Action from a baseball training camp game at Pasadena, Cal., shows Elbie Fletcher, Pittsburgh first baseman, attempting to catch Don Calloway, rookie Chicago White Soxer, off the base. The Pirates won this game, 10 to 7.

Streitmater Hits 655 Total in Tappan Loop

Wallace Paces Club League Bowlers With a 631, Jim Orr Tallies a 266 Game Last Night.

J Streitmater smacked out a spectacular 655 total to hold the spotlight at the Meder Recreation alleys last night.

A member of the Press Shop team of the Tappan Stove league, Streitmater scattered the maples for games of 216, 238 and 201 in compiling his mark.

Jim Wallace took over the individual spotlight in the Club league last night.

* * *

Bowling with the Junior Association of Commerce team, Wallace cracked out a 631 total as he led his teammates to a clean sweep over the Schoolmasters.

* * *

Wallace opened with a 225, added a 204, and finished with a 202.

Jim Orr of the Optimists, who collected a 596, scored a 266, the second high single game of the year in the circuit Orr opened with a strike, tallied a split on his next roll, and then added nine straight strikes.

Harold Selby was the only other kegler to hit the 600-mark. He put together games of 202, 197, and 207 for a 606. He paced the Liederkranz club which dropped two games to the Page Dairys. Liederkranz walked off with team honors with a 2727.

Lumbermens Insurance took two games from the Richman Clothes to retain its lead.

Lillian Marks came through with a 533 to pace the Carek Florists to three wins over the Morgan Dry Cleaners in a postponed women's league match last night. Sophia Meder added a 504.

Schmidt Opens Spring Session

O. S. U. Mentor Pins Hopes On Freshmen, Reserve.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Fresh from a Florida fishing trip, Coach Francis A. Schmidt rang the school bell today for the lads he will depend on to defend Ohio State university's western conference football championship this fall.

* * *

The mentor had comparitively few worries as he opened six weeks of spring training in the chill of "real football weather."

* * *

There were plenty of freshmen and 1939 reserves ready to step into the spots left vacant by the loss of Esco Sarkkinen, end, Capt. Steve Andrako, center; Frank Zadworney, blocking right halfback, and Vic Marino, left guard.

Replacements probably will be selected from the following list of candidates:

Halfbacks — Tom Kinkade of Toronto, Charley King of Akron and Lloyd Miller of Akron; guards —Ed Bruckner of Sandusky and Lennie Thom, who started at tackle several times last year; centers—Claude White and Bill Bell, both of last year's squad; ends—Charley Anderson, Massillon Negro, and Nick Roman of Canton, Don McCafferty of Cleveland and Regis Driscoll of Cleveland.

Three varsity backfield men were missing Don Scott and Jim Sexton are with the baseball team, and Jack Graf is recovering from a knee operation.

Angel Flattens Dutch Heffner

Pin's Foe's Shoulders In 15 Minutes, 45 Seconds.

CLEVELAND —(INS)— An angel from Singapore instead of heaven haunted the dreams of more than 12,000 wrestling fans who saw Maurice Tillet flatten Dutch Heffner in 15 minutes and 41 seconds at the Cleveland Arena last night.

* * *

Heffner is a rather tough guy in the ring himself, but last night marked his first meeting with an angel, and he probably isn't anxious for another—at least not one as tough and gargantuan as Tillet, who earned his soubriquet because he looks like anything but an angel.

* * *

An earlier match had provoked the ire of fans and an accompanying shower of vegetables and brightly-colored Easter eggs when Fred Bozic, acting as a second, attempted to help Gentleman Jack Washburn in his struggle with Cowboy Taylor.

YOUTHS TO BATTLE VETS IN BOXING TOURNAMENT

SPRINGFIELD - (AP) - Youths will put their strength against veterans in Ohio's senior A. A. U. boxing tournament here tomorrow and Thursday. Potential bombers will battle for eight divisional championships.

From the 62 entries the experts expect to find some successful sluggers. They will be stacked up against the defending state champions, Edward Bradley of Wilberforce in the bantamweight division, Benton Cobbins, lightweight, and Mat Lasita, light heavyweight, both of Cincinnati

SPORTS GOSSIP

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK—(AP)—Our operatives report the three best football teams in the south next fall will be Tulane, Duke and Tennessee. . . . Wallace Wade, Duke's head man, is going around the Carolina golf tournaments looking like he had just swallowed an aviary. . . . (And it isn't his golf score he is proud of, either). . . . Clydell Castleman's poor showing is the biggest disappointment of the spring to Bill Terry.

* * * * *

Young Al Davis, who is not in very good repute with polite fistic society because of his candy store smackings, etc., will be given a terrific buildup by the fight-mob. . . . First step was to appoint the suave Lew Burston as his manager. . . . Paavo Nurmi says the royal welcome Taisto Maki is getting from Finnish folk all along the line is taking a lot out of Taisto's galloping.

* * * * *

Attention, scouts: Here is the announcement you have been waiting for! . . . Down in Dixie there's an ambitious 18-year-older who can hurl a rock 397 feet with his left arm and 227 with his right.

His control is so good he's been barred from all the ball throwing games at the county fairs. . . . He doesn't chew, but goes for a root beer or two on Saturday nights. . . . He has his own uniform and a home made bat with which he socked a 400-foot homer plumb over the school house last summer. . . . He'll work for $2 a week and his board and if he doesn't win four of his first five games, he'll pay his own board. . . . All he asks is a chance. . . . P. S.: Larry Williams, manager of the Lawrenceville (Va.) club has the inside track.

HERE ARE THE FIGURES:

Sam Boston, one of the better Broadway handicappers, is the first out with figures on the major league races. . . . In the American league the Yanks are 1-3, the Red Sox 5-1, Philadelphia 50-1 and St. Louis 200-1. . . . The Cards are quoted 2-1 in the National, followed by the Reds 5-2, Cubs 6-1, Dodgers 6-1, Giants, 8-1, Pirates 10-1, Bees 50-1 and Phillies 200-1.

The N. Y. papers are taking turns selling the Yanks again. . . . Ten days ago one had 'em going to Governor Murphy of New Hampshire. . . . Mysterious Strangers Help Paychek In Secret Session

By JACK CUDDY

POMPTON LAKES, N. J.—(U.P.)—Two mysterious strangers were in camp today for the final act in Johnny Paychek's secret preparations for Friday night's title fight with Champion Joe Louis.

* * *

These strangers were described by Master-mind Benny Leonard as "two well known heavyweights—one from Ohio and the other from Pennsylvania—who, before nightfall, will go through secret battles with Johnny. These workouts will be real fights, but with the big gloves, of course."

* * *

The mystery pair arrived yesterday and were kept closeted in a room so that visiting newspapermen and minor camp attaches could not get a gander at them.

Leonard, the former lightweight king, explained, "their identity will not be revealed for two reasons. First, since both boys are good professional fighters and not sparring partners, they don't want it known that they worked as sparmates. Secondly, we want their identities to remain secret so that outsiders can not question them about Paychek's battle plans. They are friends of mine who have come here to do me a favor.

Today's stunt is the climax of the greatest undercover conditioning campaign for any challenger since Carpentier groomed for Dempsey back in 1921. Half of Paychek's preparations have been conducted during secret workouts.

In addition to supervising today's subrosa sessions, Leonard planned to motor over to Greenwood Lake, N. Y., and watch Champion Louis go through his next-to-last boxing drill. It appears that the Louis camp has no objection to Benny's spying upon Bomber Joe, who concludes training tomorrow.

Paychek also will take his last public workout tomorrow. The challenger planned to loaf yesterday, but he had to put on a command performance of two rounds for Chairman John J. Phelan of the New York commission.

* * *

Phelan wanted to be sure that the slightly bald mid-westerner was a fit opponent for Louis. After one round Phelan said he was convinced that the challenger was okay. Dr. William H. Walker, commission physician, examined Johnny and pronounced him in fine physical trim.

* * *

Phelan and Dr. Walker also visited Louis, who was given the physician's okay but was not required to box.

Reports Madigan May Get Loyola University Berth.

BERKELEY, Calif—(U.P.)—Edward (Slip) Madigan, ousted St. Mary's college football coach, has accepted the position of head coach at Loyola university in Los Angeles, the Berkeley Gazette said it had learned from an 'unimpeachable" source. Madigan was not available at his home for comment. He has been a free agent since the St. Mary's board of athletic control decided not to renew his contract when it expires March 31, 1941. He had been coaching there for 19 years.

STAKES STAR INJURED, OUT OF TANFORAN RUN

SAN FRANCISCO —(AP)— Heelfly is out of the Tanforan meet. The Stakes star, owned by George W. Stratton of Los Angeles, received a "ruptured sheath" yesterday.

Preliminary examination of the right front leg injury disclosed that the horse may be ready to go in training for the $50,000 gold cup at Hollywood Park this summer.

Over 80 Youths To Participate In First Bouts

Third Annual J. A. C. Tournament Scheduled to Get Under Way at 7 O'Clock.

By CHARLES MARTIN

THEIR eyes focused on a championship trophy, some 85 leather throwers square off tonight in the Mansfield high gymnasium in the first round bouts of the third annual Junior Association of Commerce A. A. U. boxing classic.

Fighting talent from Mansfield and 10 other cities will unveil their wares in 44 matches. With the entry of 20 youngsters today the list soared to an all-time high for a Mansfield tournament. Because of the large number of settos the show was moved up half an hour and will start at 7 o'clock.

* * *

Six more mittsters filed registration blanks to send the Marion group's total to 26—the largest aggregation in the meet. Columbus still holds second place with 10 entries.

* * *

Survivors of tonight's heats return Wednesday to score another victory and reach a spot in the finals Friday evening. The session Wednesday starts at 7:30 p. m., while Friday's program opens at 8:15 p. m.

Mansfield fans are not going to get an opportunity to see Jake Zacharias and Frank Truly in action. Both withdrew from the meet today. Truly is not ready for his debut, while no reason was advanced why Zacharias is out. Russ Gimble, Friendly House director, who has charge of the boxers, made the announcement.

The settlement, however, will be well represented Al Sauer 160, his brother Joe, 147, Bernard Ralls and Howard Williams, featherweights, Ed Tally, 112, Sam Walker, 118, and Fran Harrison, 112, are fighting under the Friendly House colors

Probably the outstanding visitor is Manuel Armstrong of Columbus. The Capital City lad recently won the American Legion middleweight title in Columbus and is claiming the Ohio simon pure title

Cities represented in addition to Marion, Columbus and Mansfield, are Ashland, Ada, Fremont, Bucyrus, Richwood, Loudonville, Willard and Newark.

Finishes First Year in Ring

Walker Reaches Milestone With Bout Monday Night.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Jack (Buddy) Walker, Ohio's dusky heavyweight fistic champion, rounds out his first year in the ring next Monday—and there's a pretty fair chance that he might reach the mile-stone and his first defeat at about the same time.

* * *

Walker, winner of 17 straight fights, 13 by knockouts, since he first stepped in the roped arena April 3, 1939, meets Patsy Perroni, Canton's "Fancy Dan" scrapper, in a 10-round bout on "April Fools" day, with Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champ, as referee.

* * *

Perroni, 185-pound Italian lad who went 10 rounds with Joe Louis just before the heavy king beat Jim Braddock for the crown, is rated the finest boxer in the big league ranks. On the other hand, Walker is rated the No. 10 challenger for Louis' crown, while the Canton lad isn't in the select list.

WINS DECISION

DAYTON—(AP)—After dropping George Harper of New York three times, Joe Marinelli, Dayton featherweight, won a 10-round decision last night.

Hartline Tells Youths About Rookie School.

Joe C. Hartline, president of the Mansfield Braves of the Ohio State League, was the principal speaker at a Junior baseball meeting held at the Ashland American Legion Home last night. A motion picture "Hitting All Bases" was shown at the session. Sandlot stars and Ashland college players were guests of the Juniors at the meeting. Hartline told guests about the rookie school opening April 3.

Hun Throws Masked Marvel Last Night

THE long awaited unmasking of one of the two mystery men who have featured many wrestling cards here was the top attraction of Tim Nolan's weekly Quality club show in the Armory last evening

But little Davey Reynolds, the Cedar Rapids, Ia., junior lightweight, nearly walked off with the show in the semi-final bout. Less than one minute of the 45-minute time limit match remained when Jimmie Heffner clamped him in the Indian choker to take the honors.

Taking two straight falls, the grappler known only as Heinie the Hun, still wears his mask today, but to Mansfield mat fans the paddist known as the Masked Marvel was revealed as their old friend Jack Smithers (alias Smith).

The Hun proved too much for Smithers from the beginning of the match, although it took him 18 minutes to slam him into submission in the first fall. The unmasking bout required 15 minutes and also followed a series of flying mares and body slams

After grappling with Bob Steele for 17 minutes in the show opener, Davey Reynolds finally downed him for the count. Due to the failure of Tuffy Cleet to make an appearance, Davey was scheduled also on the semi-final go. In order to give him sufficient time to recuperate. Matchmaker Nolan put on the Marvel and Hun bout in the second spot

To spot an ordinary grappler 20 pounds is no mean handicap, but when you give it to a veteran campaigner such as Jimmie Heffner, the odds are almost unsurmountable.

But not to one whose heart is as big as Davey Reynolds He gave all he had and foiled Heffner's Indian choker time and again, and finally after 22 hectic minutes, flattened Jimmie with the kangaroo kick and had the near-capacity audience standing on their chairs

Heffner finally clamped Davey in the Indian choker to take the second fall in slightly less than 17 minutes

With less than four minutes of the match remaining Heffner turned on all the heat and with seconds to go wrapped his feet about Davey's neck to take the deciding fall

The rapidly developing Steele probably took enough of Reynolds' strength in the opening bout that proved his undoing in his second appearance of the evening But win or lose Davey Reynolds still holds top honors in the hearts of Mansfield grapple enthusiasts

SPORTS PARADE

By HENRY M'LEMORE

TAMPA —(U.P.)— Don't ever tell me again that a dog is man's best fried. I'd much rather turn to an opposum in an hour of need than to a dog, if that dog happened to be a greyhound racing dog. An opposum mght not actually render you any assistance, but at least he wouldn't do you any harm.

* * *

Such is not true of a racing greyhound, who invariably bites the hand that feeds him through the pari-mutuel windows. Lest I seem overly bitter on the matter, just step into my shoes with me and allow me to explain the circumstances.

* * *

Through its hideous check-up system the United States government to which I swore allegiance at the end of every grammar school day, learned that I was remiss about my income tax payment. With a petulant little fussiness that I can't understand from a great big government, it demanded that I pay my March installment for 1938. Furthermore, there was a hint that snappiness would be appreciated.

* * *

With all my ready cash tied up in good, sound wildcat stocks, the situation was alarming. I hastily ran through a list of all my friends, and just as hastily decided not to waste my time calling on them for help. But the word "friend" gave me an idea. Hadn't some bygone senator spoken a eulogy about a dog in which he said that a dog was man's best friend?

* * *

With the little money I had thoughtfully saved by not paying my income tax this year, I hurried to the dog track. It seemed so simple at the moment. A man needs a friend. A few miles out of town there are kennels full of his friends ready to work for him, ready to make money for him. I shudder when I think that I whistled and sang on the way to the track, and with a grand gesture told the cab driver to wait for me. I had quite a bit of trouble evading him on my walk home.

* * *

I wasn't particularly alarmed when a little brindle friend, the No. 8 dog, let me down in the first race. Nor was I at all distressed when a little black and white friend fell down on the far turn in the second race and came in last.

* * *

I'll admit, however, that I began to question the deep bond between the dogs and me when, in the third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth races my friends had come nowhere near winning. Things brightened up a bit in the ninth race, though, when a fawn colored friend of mine got his picture taken along with another dog to determine the winner. The friend of my friend was the winner. And for the first time I recalled the breadth of shoulder of the cab driver whom I had left outside with the meter ticking.

* * *

Maybe the dogs, I reasoned, don't know that their good friend, Henry McLemore, is here and counting on them. So I walked back to the paddock before the last two races and made myself conspicuous. One dog, on his way to the track for the tenth race, tried to lick my hand, so I rushed to the windows to get a bet down.

* * *

He must have mistaken me for someone else because he ran as if he were my bitter enemy. He was last at the start, worse than that in the backstretch, and was forced to spurt toward the finish to prevent the rabbit from lapping him.

LOS ANGELES — Gabby Hartnett, Chicago Cubs' manager who should know all about big league catching, rates all three of his rookie receivers as big-league possibilities. Bob Collins, from Los Angeles, is listed for the third string job supporting Gabby and Al Todd this season. Clyde McCullough looks good except for weak hitting, while 19-year-old Al Montgomery is considered the best prospect of all, though he's a year or so away from the majors.

* * *

WINTER HAVEN, Fla.— Starting a roundabout journey back to New York with today's game against the Giants, the World-champion Yankees discovered they have not yet put their regular team on the field for an exhibition game. Joe DiMaggio, Red Rolfe and Bill Dickey haven't played much and Joe Gordon has been out five days with a cold and a bruised thigh.

* * *

SAN FRANCISCO — Fern Lee Bell's valiant efforts to avoid returning to the minors is attracting the Pittsburgh Pirates' attention. The 27-year-old outfielder who came from Louisville in 1938, is slated to go to Syracuse in part payment for long Joe Gee. But he's leading all the Pirate batters with a .600 average. Wally Moses of the Athletics also has been doing some notable batting in the Pittsburgh-Philadelphia series. He had a perfect day at the plate with two doubles and a triple in a five-inning stint.

TAMPA, Fla.—The Cincinnati Reds may return to Havana next year—there is a $6,000 guarantee—but the players say if they never see Cuba again it will be too soon. In addition to getting only a draw in games, the voyage back was rough. The Reds resume their "grapefruit" campaign tomorrow against the Giants, picked by Manager Bill McKechnie as the "dark horse" team in the National League.

* * *

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — The Cleveland Indians have optioned four players to their Wilkes-Barre, Pa., farm in the Eastern League. One is Paul Calvert, bespectacled French-Canadian pitcher who will be watched closely for possible development. The others are Pitcher Paul Thompson, Catcher Lou Kahn and Outfielder Del Jones.

Deny Reports Of Club Sale

Farley, Cox, Patterson Say 'No' to Yankee Rumors.

NEW YORK — (INS) — Another round of denials from the principals today greeted the latest reports that the New York Yankees were about to be sold.

* * *

Postmaster General James A. Farley answered merely "no comment" to reports that he and former Governor James M. Cox of Ohio were negotiating a deal.

* * *

Cox reported he was "not interested." No immediate comment was obtained from publisher Joseph Medill Patterson who was reported another prospective purchaser.

President Ed Barrow and Vice-president George Ruppert again repeated their denials. Byron M. Clark, jr., the Ruppert attorney and one of the three trustees for the estate said he hadn't heard anything of the reported negotiations but emphasized any good offer that would help the trustees realize that maximum from the Jacob Ruppert estate wouldn't be sniffed at.

PROFIT-SELLING OFFSETS BUYING OF AIR STOCKS

Slightly Lower Prices Posted For Most Leaders; Bonds, Commodities Ease.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Profit selling in the recently buoyant air transports tended to offset buying of plane manufacturing stocks in today's market.

Elsewhere slightly lower prices were posted for most leaders. Activity, small from the start, contracted further near the second hour.

Bonds and commodities eased and foreign securities markets, reopening after the lengthy Easter holiday, were somewhat shaky.

A sharp break in the "free" British pound sterling to the lowest level in years in terms of the dollar, combined with weakness of French and Belgian currencies, helped chill sentiment for stocks, brokers said. European war developments and domestic business news apparently provided scant market stimulation.

Interesting to holders of petroleum shares was the action of the Texas railroad commission in ordering a cut of 35,784 barrels daily in the state's April crude production to 1,443,773 barrels.

British Score New Victory In War on Nazis at Sea

THIRD GERMAN ORE-CARRIER RUN AGROUND

U. S. Action Makes Latest and Biggest American Planes Available to Allies.

(By International News Service)

LONDON—Great Britain's intensified naval campaign against Germany produced still more results today as another German vessel ran aground on the Danish coast south of Hirtshals.

Identity of the German vessel was not revealed beyond the statement that it was a sistership of the German coke carrier Edmund Hugo Stinnes IV, which was sunk Sunday night by a British submarine off the west coast of Jutland, Denmark.

At the same time, a British admiralty statement said that during the week ending March 24 not a single British or allied merchant vessel was sunk—the first week since the war began that such vessels escaped unscathed.

Eight neutral ships were sunk, however, the statement said, but none of these was convoyed by British or French warships.

During the same period two German vessels were torpedoed by British submarines, the admiralty added.

These torpedoings resulted from concentration of British surface and undersea naval units in the Skagerrak anh other Scandinavian waters to cut off German imports of Swedish iron ore.

Today this British naval campaign was intensified, and the latest development was the grounding of the sister-ship of the Edmund Hugo Stinnes. It was learned that the unidentified German vessel ran aground while attempting to evade pursuing British naval craft.

This was the second German vessel to run aground since the new British naval drive got under way. On Sunday the German steamer Ostpreussen ran aground off Skagerrak while en route to Germany with a cargo of coke.

The navy submarine and surface campaign in the Skagerrak and adjacent waters is evidence of the determination of Britain to halt the iron ore shipments to the reich from Sweden.

In this drive Britain is taking advantage of the fact, that with the Gulf of Bothnia still land-locked, the only sea route available to Germany for transport of these supplies is the one running down the coast of Norway and thence across to Germany.

Experts state that this route is exceptionally vulnerable to submarine warfare.

Way Cleared to Buy Latest Planes.

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—The Allies were expected today to place huge new orders for late-model army and navy airplanes as a result of the administration's newly-developed policy of permitting their sale to foreign powers.

Full details of the new policy were expected to be revealed officially tomorrow when Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring appears before the house military affairs committee. The committee will begin then an inquiry into government policies regarding sales of planes and munitions.

Development of the plane policy leaked out despite the secrecy with which it had been shrouded. Authoritative sources predicted that its promulgation would end the impasse met by the British and French purchasing mission in their effort to obtain concessions before placing orders for an estimated 8,000 planes valued at approximately $1,000,000,000.

Chairman Andrew J. May of the house committee, and Rep. Dow Harter, D., O., who heads the group's aviation sub-committee, conferred with war department officials during drafting of the policy, and are understood to be fully appraised of its contents.

The policy, which has caused a controversy over how far the United States should go in assisting the Allies, was described as "winning the approval of all concerned."

It was shaped to carry out President Roosevelt's statement last week that no military secrets will be disclosed by selling new types of planes abroad.

While the cabinet conferred, groups of civilians asked for weapons and volunteered to aid in defense of the government.

APPROVE FARM LOAN CHANGES

Wallace Endorses Jones Bill Seeking Lower Interest Rate on Borrowings.

WASHINGTON—(INS)—Secretary of Agriculture Wallace today advocated a sweeping revision of the entire farm loan system—including lower interest rates and government guarantees of bonds in testimony before the house agriculture committee today.

He endorsed major features of a bill by Committee Chairman Jones (D., Tex.) which scraps important parts of the 25-year-old federal land bank system.

Emphasizing the need for lower interest rates on farm loans, Wallace approved the policy of the Jones bill to make loans at 3 to 3½ per cent.

His testimony opened up the possibility of another major piece of legislation on the administration's "must" program for the present session of congress.

Major proposals made by Wallace were:

1. Lower interest rates based upon direct government borrowings or guarantee of farm loan bonds, with government borrowing money at about 2 per cent and loaning at 3 to 3½ per cent.
2. Refinancing of existing farm loans on a maximum 40-year basis.
3. Abolish requirement that farmer borrowers take stock in land bank associations.
4. Immediate sweeping re-financing plans.
5. Allow farmers to make variable payments on loans.
6. Permit government to make repairs on farms of borrowing farmers.

Wallace balked, however, at features of the Jones bill making foreclosure difficult. He suggested that these provisions be tightened up.

FORUM SPEAKER LABELS MODERN MORALITY SYSTEMS AS PAGANISM

Three modern systems of morality which he described as "pagan because they try to establish a rule of mortlity outside God," rule of morality outside God," I. T. Kelly, a professor at De Sales college, Toledo, in the fourth lecture in an open forum series at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

Dr. Kelly spoke on the topic, "Where Are We Going?" His lecture was one of a series of five sponsored in Mansfield by the Catholic societies and clubs of the city.

The pagan systems, Dr. Kelly said, are Individualism, Naturalism, and Statism.

"Individualism makes the individual the norm of morality, Dr. Kelly said. "One does what he judges is good, independent of any divine law. This is the exaggerated respect for self that has led to the 'rugged individualis' in business, industry and commerce and has had much to do with man's inhumanity to man.

"Its consequences are felt in the field of education and have resulted in an egotistic youth such as met recently in the National Youth Congress, booing the president and congress and cheering for Sovietism."

Naturalism emancipates the human instincts and senses, he said. "It is paganism, deification of the passions. It is the contradiction of original sin, an attempt to oppose the mystery of the transmission of sin by the affirmation of the perfection of human nature."

"Statism is the worship of the state," he continued. "It is more than atheism of an aggressive nature. The dictators do not want to stamp out religion—they want to steal it. The new religion will become Statism, which is also paganism.

"Statism is found in a lesser degree in the democracies. It is basically and implicitly in every state that rules out God, and it is perhaps the gravest danger Christian morality faces.

"Where are we going? Wherever the morality we adopt leads us," Dr. Kelly asserted. "I am of the opinion that the pagan moralities are going to be tossed away and that the immediate future is going to apply the principles of Christian morality in individual family and social life. If it does not, there is no alternative but reversion to complete paganism."

Dr. W. T. Sullivan, professor of European history at De Sales college, will give the final lecture in the series April 3 in the Mansfield-Leland hotel ballroom. His subject will be "Peace or War?"

DEMONSTRATES NEW 'LIQUID' BOMB TODAY

Inventor Declares Explosive Will 'Utterly Destroy' Everything for Miles.

MIDDLE RIVER, Md.—(U.P.)—Lester P. Barlow publicly demonstrates today for the first time a liquid oxygen-carbon explosive which he claims is the most destructive ever created.

Barlow, who a few years ago offered the navy a 2,000-pound TNT steel bomb which he said "could penetrate five vessels placed side by side and make holes big enough to drive 40 horses through," told the senate military affairs committee recently that his newest and best explosive can "utterly destroy everything within miles."

Relatively small charges of the explosive will be used for the demonstration that Barlow has arranged for the press only. The tests will be made on the grounds of the Glenn L. Martin company, aircraft manufacturers, which employes Barlow as a consultant in the development of explosives.

Barlow will demonstrate today safety features as well as the destructive qualities which he claims for his new invention.

He will fire high-powered rifle bullets through a charge of his new explosive to show that it can be handled safely and set off only by special detonaters. Another charge will be burned to prove that there is no hazard from accidental explosives due to flames. Other samples will be fired from small cannon pointblank against steel barricades to illustrate its immunity to impact hazards.

A small mortar will be used in still another demonstration, shooting a charge of the liquid oxygen-carbon 1,000 feet into the air to prove that even this shock and that of its fall to the earth will not detonate it. This same charge then will be detonated.

Barlow expects to conduct more exhaustive tests soon for army and navy officials, who have been skeptical. These tests were arranged after the senate and house military naval committees heard Barlow describe his secret formula.

JURY SESSION DELAYED AGAIN

Panel Waived in Farm Suit, to Hear $5,000 Damage Case Tomorrow.

The week's schedule in common pleas court was juggled again today and the petit jury's session was postponed until Wednesday morning when a $5 000 damage suit is scheduled for trial

The jury was waived today in the trial of a $128 judgment suit and the case was submitted to Judge C. H. Huston. It involves the action of Michael Sauer to collect that amount from Helen McFadden of Shelby who allegedly forced him to vacate her farm in Jackson township before his lease had expired.

Sauer asks damages for investments he made in the farm and loss of crops as the result of having to move.

Atty. Joseph A. Bayer is Sauer's counsel and Attys Henkel and Gongwer represent the defendant.

When it convenes tomorrow the jury will be asked to decide whether L. D. Gore of Shelby is entitled to damages for injuries his wife, Alice, received in a fall downstairs in a Shelby apartment owned by George W. Hoffman. Accusing Hoffman of negligence in failing to have the stairway lighted, Gore asks $5,000 damages. Attorneys for Gore are C. F. Creedman and H. M. Rust while Attys. Long, Anderson and Green of Shelby will present Hoffman's case.

After hearing evidence yesterday in a case in which the Shelby Mutual Plate Glass and Casualty company seeks to avoid responsibility for payment of damages resulting from a traffic accident in Mansfield, Judge Huston instructed attorneys to submit briefs of the case to him for study.

The Shelby firm asked the court to rule it does not have to defend five damage suits pending in Cuyahoga county or pay judgments that may be awarded the plaintiffs in the action. It had issued an insurance policy on a car which figured in a fatal accident in 1938 on Lexington avenue. The firm argued that title to the car was changed without its knowledge.

DIES PROBERS SEEK USER OF F. D. R.'S NAME

Chairman Wants Criminal Action Brought Against Pittsburgh Communist Leader.

BULLETIN

PITTSBURGH —(AP)— Criminal libel charges filed by a former investigator for the Dies committee brought about the arrest here of John L. Spivak, author, lecturer and writer for the Communist "Daily Worker" and Communist magazine "New Masses."

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Chairman Martin Dies of the committee investigating un-American activities demanded today that James H. Dolsen, Pittsburgh Communist leader, be prosecuted for allegedly affixing the name of President Roosevelt to a Communist party membership card.

Dies coupled his demand for criminal prosecution with a statement that he intends to ask the house immediately to sustain the committee's contempt citation of Dolsen for his refusal to disclose the true identity of the Communist who used Mr. Roosevelt's name.

He pointed out that Dolsen, a slight, 55-year-old former WPA worker, had "admitted he printed the name (Franklin D. Roosevelt) on the card." Dies said he would write the Pittsburgh district attorney at once asking that prosecution be instituted.

Secret service agents investigated circumstances surrounding the "Roosevelt" membership card which was revealed during Dolsen's testimony before the committee yesterday. White House Secretary Stephen T. Early said it "cannot be anything less than a forgery."

The contempt citation will be referred to Speaker William B. Bankhead and then, if upheld by the house, to the local U. S. attorney for prosecution in federal court.

REDS CALL IT INSULT

NEW YORK—(UP)—The Communist newspaper, Daily Worker, said in an editorial today that the suggestion of President Roosevelt being a Communist is "an insult" to the party.

"Of course Roosevelt is not a member of the party of socialism of the American workers," the newspaper said.

"Thinking of him today, in his present role as the chief of imperialist war makers attempting to drag our country into the European war and, quite consistently, resorting to the Sherman anti-trust law in an attempt to exterminate the American trade unions as a part of the same reactionary war policy, the suggestion that he is a member of the Communist party is an insult."

Marathon Splasher Forced to Give Up Try After 14 Hours.

MIAMI, Fla. —(AP)— Marathon swimmer Paul Chotteau, complaining because wind-whipped waves forced him to abandon his 71-mile splash from Bimini, Bahamas, to Palm Beach last night, asserted he would make a new try "as soon as possible."

The 245-pound former concert master was making excellent time across the shark-infested Gulf stream when a rising wind kicked up whitecaps so rough a little boat convoying him threatened to swamp. Chotteau had been in the water 14 hours. 7 minutes and had covered approximately 33 miles when he was forced to quit.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Charles E. Wheland, confessed embezzler of $475,000, today was denied for at least a year a parole from Ohio penitentiary, by the state pardon and parole commission. It previously had ruled he was sentenced improperly.

The case of the 51-year-old former Uhrichsville bank president was continued until March, 1941.

FIRE ON PLANES

LUXEMBOURG —(INS)—Twenty unidentified planes, flying in two groups, passed over Luxembourg at a high altitude today. an individual," he said. "Her stately presence commanded attention in any group and her fine tastes stamped her as a woman of culture. Her mind was keen. She had ideas and a way of expressing them. She was not afraid to stand up for unpopular causes and ideas.

"She was not one of those women," he continued, "who unburdened herself to everybody, although she was especially fond of people and had a wide circle of close friends, not only in Mansfield, but over the country.

"She possessed a reserve of power which always commanded respect, and if she freely and frankly disagreed, as she often did, she also admired a person who disagreed with her. She was a person, I say, in the best sense of the word, and we shall not soon meet her like again. Her death removed an interesting and a strong character from our community.

Rev. Young delivered his eulogy from the long front hall of Raemelton House, while the rooms were filled with relatives and friends. Casket bearers were Donald McLean, Louis J. Ott, J. T. Lusignan, Henry Sanford, J. H. Kullman and Otto Kline.

CAR GOES WILD ON BUSY STREET

Crashes Across Sidewalk and Into Drugstore Window.

CLEVELAND —(INS)— William Horn, 65, was held by police today on a charge of driving while intoxicated after his automobile careened through a dodging crowd of theatergoers and shoppers, across a sidewalk and into a drug store window.

The accident occurred at the busy Euclid-East 105th street intersection between the dinner and theater hours, but no one was injured although scores of persons were forced to scatter wildly as the car sped east on Euclid and made an illegal turn south onto 105th street across the crowded crosswalk without slowing down, according to police.

Police said that before the crash Horn also had sideswiped a taxicab, locked bumpers with another automobile and crashed two red traffic signals.

URGES WILLARD TO DEVELOP OWN 'PERSONALITY'

Routzon Tells Club of Three Essentials Needed For Progressive City.

More than 80 members and guests at the annual dinner-meeting of the Willard Commercial club last night were told by John G. Routzon, secretary-manager of the Mansfield Chamber of Commerce to "develop a community personality."

Pointing out that Willard was not an industrial city and could not expect to gain prominence from developing along that line, he pointed to cities of similar size which have gained nation-wide recognition through the development of their "community personality."

Among those he named were Van Wert, which annually conducts a peony festival; Holland, Mich., which sponsors a spring tulip festival, and Chardon, east of Cleveland which publicizes its annual maple syrup event.

"These events bring hundreds of thousands of dollars into those communities," he said. "Advertise your community with something that will develop its personality and the payroll dollar will find its way to Willard."

Urges Bid For Farm Dollar.

Routzon, who was introduced by J. C. Gibson, president of the Pioneer Rubber company, suggested to the businessmen that they encourage the "agriculture dollar" and extend their "farmer relationship."

"It's the payroll dollar that makes the wheels of the community go 'round, whether they are industrial dollars or agriculture dollars. As they increase the community advances."

He advocated the Town Hall idea where the community can gather to exchange ideas and stressed upon them the need for community co-operation, enthusiasm and aggressiveness.

"No matter how good a community program is outlined it will amount to little unless you have those three factors," Routzon added.

The annual meeting was held at the Trinity Lutheran church. Max Jump, president of the organization presided. Gibson was toastmaster.

Finley, whose brother, Lester Finley, was on a second motorcycle, said he saw the truck but couldn't stop nor swerve to avoid it.

His cycle struck the front fender of the truck and threw him off. His brother narrowly missed striking him

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, MARCH 26, 1940.

In all fairness to Confucius, it should be said that he is being frequently misquoted.

Rather awkward, after remarking: "There's a woman driver for you," to have it turn out to be a man at the wheel.

Hotel men in Maine will devote March 30 to paying tribute to the man who originated the hole in doughnuts—and ask all dunkers to join in observance of the occasion.

To Study Traffic Problems

SERIOUS study of Mansfield's present traffic conditions appears to be an essential preliminary to whatever improvement can be brought about through the interested co-operation of the citizens' traffic committee, of which Lewis F. Hartman has been chosen as general chairman by Mayor Locke.

Except for those few who have already devoted considerable study to the subject, the local traffic situation is more a matter of hastily formed impressions than of the complete understanding that will be needed before practicable plans for improvement can be intelligently recommended.

The extent to which Mansfield streets are devoted to motor traffic, local and transient, naturally suggests more policing than is possible with the present limited personnel in the police department, as enforcement is a generally recognized essential to safety.

Continuance of education is also important—as is realized by even casual observation of the dumbness displayed by some motorists who are obviously unfamiliar with traffic regulations or even the simplest rules of safe driving.

But the third of the "e" requirements for safety—engineering—is one to which little attention has thus far been given in Mansfield, and the one that will probably have a place in whatever survey is made in seeking a solution of present problems.

The growing volume of heavy truck traffic through Mansfield has considerably aggravated an already difficult situation, and some way of detouring this traffic AROUND the city instead of over main thoroughfares will eventually have to be provided if there is to be any hope of making Mansfield streets adequate for the legitimate traffic load they are now required to carry and which may be expected to increase from year to year.

Other Ohio cities are also strongly stressing the importance of greater traffic safety and are taking steps in that direction. Whatever can be accomplished in Mansfield, through co-operation of officials and citizens, will be well worthwhile—as convenience of the motoring public merits consideration, in addition to the safety element.

No Help From Cosmic Ray

ANYBODY who was thinking of hitching his power equipment to a cosmic ray had better start looking for another source of energy. Dr. Robert A. Millikan, one of the country's cosmic ray authorities, came back recently from a research trip in equatorial regions with the sad news that such rays would never be effectively harnessed for practical use.

Cosmic rays are perhaps 1,000 times as powerful as the strongest radiation produced by atomic explosions in laboratories, but they hardly ever get to the earth's surface with their full strength and could not be relied on for a steady flow of energy.

It seems these rays have to buck too much interference as they approach the earth. The earth itself is a huge magnet and its atmosphere is alive with magnetic lines running between the north and south poles.

Active and Passive Evils

AMERICANS who are fearful that every book published in England is subtle propaganda to get this country into the European war should read "What Has Happened to Europe" by Geoffrey T. Garratt. The author is a member of England's Liberal party. He has been newspaper correspondent, master of a boys' school, civil servant in India, cavalryman in Mesopotamia during the World war, and adviser to the Ethiopian minister in London. He is for the English people and heartily supports the Allied cause, but he is against "Chamberlainism" and the blunders of conservatives in Europe in the years preceding the present war.

"No part of Europe, no group of individuals, can be wholly free from responsibility for the cruel and bestial actions which have disgraced the last few years," he writes frankly. "In England and France, and to a lesser extent in the other democracies, there have been political subterfuges and evasions, sins of omission, divided loyalties, the falsifying of news, and the shoddy internationalism of financiers.

"These have directly encouraged aggression and brutality. The shape of European politics in the last decade is due to the interlocking of two evil things, one active, the other passive."

The active evil is the aggression of the dictators. The passive evil is the acquiescence in it of the democracies so long as they are not the ones immediately threatened. History may show that the passive group did as much damage as the other to the various treaties and guarantees of protection, co-operation and non-aggression signed between 1919 and 1938.

Fiction Standards Changed

CARL J. WEBER, professor of English at Colby college and author of a biography of Thomas Hardy, tells us that Hardy's work was once considered rude and barbarous. Reviewers used to warn readers against him. Another English professor once called one of Hardy's novels "most objectionable."

Today a reader, turning to Hardy from the novels of Steinbeck, Caldwell, Faulkner, and other contemporary writers, is likely to wonder what those earlier reviewers meant by "rude," "barbarous" and "objectionable."

And that leads to another thought: What will fiction be like fifty years from now when today's "hardboiled" writers appear as mild and decorous as Hardy now seems?

Mild Profanity Sanctioned

A CHICAGO JUDGE, Joseph J. Drucker, contributes to civilization by laying down the law for the use of profanity in bowling.

The bowler has a right to cuss when he fails to get a strike, but this must be gentle and addressed to the ball—not to the other players. And when he lets off steam in a genteel way, players on the same team or in the next alley who happen to overhear it must not take it personally.

And now, maybe quite soon, some enlightened jurist may perform a similar service for baseball, tennis, golf and pinochle.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Mr. Elliott Nugent, famed Ohio State university alumnus, old classmate of Jim Thurber, old friend of Bob Benchley, ex-news reporter, actor, film director, co-author of "The Male Animal" – a Broadway hit—lay billowed and pillowed in his wife's boudoir at 520 East 86th street, an aura of benignancy playing about his thin, blond head.

A number of things had conspired to bring about this salubrious state of contentment, (a) he had a slight cold; (b) he had just read in the papers that he and his wife, the former Norma Lee, were debating a divorce; and (c) the comedy which he and Thurber had co-written on trains and in west coast hotels and on ships passing through the Panama Canal had just been sold to the movies for $150,000.

That's a lot of money, $150,000. That's a funny thing to debate, a divorce. That's a good excuse to take a rest, a cold.

Let's debate that divorce first. "Norma and I were flattered," Nugent confessed, "because nobody ever said that about us before. We've been married 14 years, we've raised three kids, and for years we've lived in Hollywood. But nobody ever rumored that the Nugents had pffft! We'd about made up our minds that we were nobodies, because almost everybody who is important gets rumored about. But now that we have finally 'arrived' we're very pleased, and we hope all our friends read it, too."

* * *

NOW the play. When you co-write a play you blend your ideas with the ideas of someone else. You work them around until they take form.

"Jim had an idea to start with which sounded pretty good to me, and I had a few ideas too, and we finally got together. We talked it over and sketched the thing out last February, but it wasn't until much later that we got down to work. You can't co-write a comedy when one of you is in New York and the other is in Hollywood. Finally Thurber and his wife came out and we got going.

"We wrote different parts, and then re-wrote each other's stuff. Some of it he wrote on trains to and from New York. Some of it I wrote on the coast. Jim even took a lot of notes and wrote some of it on the ship coming back through the Panama Canal. That's the way it was. All the pieces seemed to fit. Then we tried it out on the coast."

Q: "But can you tell anything about a coast tryout—whether it will go across in New York?"

A: "Sometimes you can, and we were pretty confident that we had a good property. We thought if we had a good cast, that we'd do all right, but of course no one can anticipate a smash hit, or even dream that you can sell the movies for $150,000. Pretty good, eh!"

* * *

WHEN Nugent is felling pretty satisfied he accompanies his remarks with a quick, sly sort of gee-I'm-happy wink. This wink takes the place of a smile, because Nugent is no cheshire cat. He doesn't grin too much. This wink is just his way of expressing exuberance.

After reading this over I find that I haven't explained that cold. It wasn't a cold, actually. Nugent just thought he might get a cold, and as it was an off day, with no matinee, and as his own quarters were occupied by Herbert S. Duffy, a pal of old Columbus, O., days who is house-guesting this week, he decided to seek out a quiet comfortable haven where he could relax and enjoy the sunlight streaming in through the south windows.

So he chose the boudoir of Mrs. Nugent, all reports of imminent separation and divorce notwithstanding.

THERE'S GRATITUDE FOR YOU

Oppose Consolidation Proposals

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

THERE is considerable talk in congress of the necessity for consolidation of government. I've heard the same thing urged at headquarters of the United States Chamber of Commerce and by officials of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Every time governmental consolidation is urged the conclusion generally is drawn that the movement is in the direction of power—something Fascistic or Nazi-istic.

I think this consolidation talk is different from that.

The dope is this:

In years long gone by, government had to be pretty local.

For instance, I was brought up in a town which was the governmental seat at the northwestern corner of one of Iowa's northwestern counties. To get from the southeastern corner of that county to its northwestern corner was a trip comparable to a trip from Chicago. The roads, in bad weather, were a foot deep in mud. One night I'd been to a hamlet 16 miles from home to get the news of a cyclone. Ready to return, I couldn't find a livery man willing to risk a team on those highways, and had to walk, along the railroad right-of-way. Today I could do it in 30 minutes by bus, or less in a taxicab.

In "them times," then, a county seat was central.

Mere County Commissioners.

Members of our board of county commissioners rated locally, politically, as members of a state legislature rate now in comparison with congressmen.

If our municipal "coppers" had encountered a state policeman, they'd have incarcerated him. Police authority ended at the township's edge. After that, it was the sheriff's—then, between sheriff and sheriff.

Now, our consolidation advocates want to consolidate counties.

Their reasoning is that eight or ten counties can be "skwushed" into one county per group—sheriffs, commissioners, treasurers and judges, consolidated.

Their eight-or-ten-combined county seat, it alleged, in this day of automobiles, will be as convenient as the one-county-seat used to be in the era of the mud road and lumber wagon.

The consolidation would cut out a lot of salaries, certainly.

That's one of the objections to it. The local office-holders don't like the idea.

How Far Should It Go?

The question also arises:

How far should consolidation go?

States-righters have their voice in the matter.

They haven't any objection to intra-state consolidation, but they certainly draw the line on any federal interference.

The relief question enters into the equation.

Relief's half federal; half local. The locality wants to boss it politically. The federal government wants to boss it, being contributary.

The federal government wants consolidation. It's more convenient and undoubtedly cheaper. Local government objects; it gets political "gravy" out of its allowances of Uncle Sam's money, passed through its hands.

The more it's split up, in all probability, the more it costs.

The conclusion seems to be:

Let the subdivisions consolidate.

The more they consolidate the more economical they're likely to be—because otherwise their home folk will yell.

The trouble with congress is:

It's too remote. The taxpayers don't know what it's doing, as they know only about their local board of aldermen and county supervisors.

Health and Diet

Mastery Over Rectal Disorders.

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

AMONG the causes listed for constipation are rectal diseases, and they are the reason for much other ill health also. Most forms of rectal diseases can nowadays be treated in the physician's office. The diseases suitable for this form of treatment are hemorrhoids (by injection) fissure, fistula (of some types), inflamed crypts, pruritus or itching.

I know of no type of surgery that seems to me to have made more advances concerning the comfort of the patient than rectal surgery in recent years. Nor do I know any branch of surgery in which the personal training of the surgeon results in any more rewards to the patient. The trained rectal surgeon has learned to be gentle, and with the aid of his electric-lighted instruments, to survey the whole field of operation thoroughly before he begins.

Anesthesia Aids.

The invention of various types of local anaesthesia has allowed a great many procedures to be carried out in the surgeon's office, thus saving the expense, as well as the inconvenience and discomfort, of hospitals, and interfering very little with the pursuit of the patient's ordinary activities and work.

Hemorrhoids, or piles, especially of the external type, can now be removed by local anesthesia and injection in the office. What is called the "acute bleeding pile" is simply one in which the blood has become clotted. Many people walk around with these agonizing conditions which can be rapidly and safely alleviated. Internal hemorrhoids can be treated by injection.

Fissure Painful.

Another painful and annoying condition easily remedied is fissure or ulcer. The skin involved is about the most sensitive of any place in the body, and what seems like an extremely large and painful condition is really very small and very easily relieved.

Infected crypts are very annoying, giving rise to itching and burning and a feeling of uneasiness, but can be very satisfactorily cared for in office treatment.

Itching, or pruritus ani, is one of the most annoying and embarrassing of human ailments. Very frequently it is simply due to hemorrhoids or cryptitis of the rectum and can be relieved by proper operation. Local treatments are usually of little value.

When cases have resisted all other forms of treatment, it is possible to inject the skin with a solution which produces a prolonged anesthetic action. Its application may give complete relief.

Timely Editorial

Plain Clothes Traffic Men.

Judge James A. Bowman's ruling that a plainclothes member of the police force can make arrests for traffic violations touches an important —and tender—point of motoring ethics.

When is it permissible to break traffic laws?

The 100 percenter hesitates, then says, "When there's nothing in sight and it can't possibly hurt anybody."

The rest probably wouldn't care to say so, but their idea is that it's permissible to break traffic laws when there's no policeman in sight. It's sad but true that there are more drivers of this kind than there are of the other two.

Best thing that could happen to traffic law enforcement would be for a red hot rumor to get into circulation that every man in an ordinary business suit, overcoat and hat is really a traffic policeman waiting—and itching—for a chance to make a pinch. It would be better than adding 300 men to the traffic squad.—Canton Repository.

Daily Bible Thought

A new commandment I give unto you. That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another.—John 13:34.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—It is no longer any secret that Jim Farley is definitely lined up with the anti-third termers. But not generally known is the fact that Jim actually plans a show-down with Roosevelt regarding the president's own plans, and this showdown will come before the Democratic convention at Chicago.

Jim made up his mind to do this about the same time he issued his recent Massachusetts bombshell labeled, "My name will be presented to the national convention."

Democratic insiders had known for some time that Farley was cold to the idea of the president running again, but he side-stepped a positive commitment. He always declared that he was confident the president had no intention to seek re-election.

In the past month, with Roosevelt slates being entered in various states under obvious White House guidance, Farley's aloofness has hardened to out-and-out hostility. From being on the fence he has slid over definitely to the anti-third term group.

Not only will Jim aggressively fight a third term, but he is prepared to denounce it publicly. However, he will not talk out until he has had a show-down with Roosevelt, at which time he will insist on a categoric "yes" or "no" answer.

If there is no reply, or an unsatisfactory one, then Jim is prepared to express his opposition publicly. He is aware that such a statement would play into the hands of the GOP and that it may mean finale for him politically, but he feels that he owes it to the Democratic party and the country frankly to state his views.

The Massachusetts statement was Farley's opening gun in his plan to smoke out Roosevelt. From now on, regardless of their close ties and their still warm personal friendship (as far as Farley is concerned), they are two rival candidates.

Note — Farley was absolutely sincere when he declared that he was "in no combination with anyone." Recent reports that he was secretly allied with Garner are unfounded. Privately Jim thinks Garner is getting nowhere fast. His own personal ticket is Hull and Farley.

Congressman's Costs.

AN OLD Capitol Hill axiom is that you can get a congressman to talk about almost anything but the size of his bankroll. He'll orate at great length about the way the taxpayer's money is being squandered, but ask him how much of it he himself has managed to salt away during his years on the public payroll, and you've got a speechless congressman.

One exception to this rule is lanky, tobacco-chewing Bob Secrest of Ohio. When he announced his candidacy for re-election for a fifth term the other day, Secrest accompanied the statement with an itemized account of his personal financial affairs. A public official, he told his constituents, is not entitled to privacy regarding his personal wealth, "for by this means the public can best measure his honesty in office."

"I have drawn $10,000 a year in my eight years in congress," reported Secrest, "yet though I live as I always did before, I have saved only $9,000, chiefly in insurance and realty. On the other hand, I owe $4,200. Four campaigns have taken thousands of dollars of my salary.

"In addition, income tax on my salary has been over $2,000, my telephone bills have cost me more than $5,000, chiefly long distance calls to help individuals and communities in my district. In my first five years in Washington, I spent $4,000 for rent and I have spent thousands of dollars on rail and auto transportation, over and above my mileage allowance, and have worn out five new cars.

"Further, several thousand dollars have gone for charity to individuals and worthy organizations in my district. That's the record. As long as I am in congress I feel that the people are entitled to know where my money goes and what I own."

McNutt Income Taxes.

THE McNutt income tax investigation has boiled down to the problem of smoking out big, jovial Bowman ("Bo") Elder, ex-treasurer of the American Legion and finance man for the McNutt forces in Indiana.

Elder was the man who received the funds from the Two Per Cent club (by which state employes gave the party 2 per cent of their salary), and he also knew—or the treasury thinks he knew—where these funds were were disbursed.

It is the claim of the McNutt group that while large funds were received, they were all paid out for political purposes, and for this reason no income taxes were payable. In fact, McNutt, himself, then a state employe, did not even file an income tax return.

However, the treasury insists on getting details on how the funds were spent and Bo Elder is the key to this puzzle. They are waiting for him to talk, and he, in turn, says he will not be made the scapegoat.

Meanwhile, McNutt forces, jittery over delay and anxious to push the campaign of their candidate, demand that the treasury either exonerate or indict. A break in the present impasse is coming soon.

Note — "Tuck" Stanley, McNutt's discouraged publicity expert, has resigned.

Borah Statue.

THE State of Idaho plans to enshrine the memory of its late great Senator William E. Borah under the lofty dome of the National Capitol, where he served for more than 30 years.

The state will fill its quota of statues in Statuary Hall (the original chamber of the house of representatives, where each state is allowed to place two statues). The sculptor has not yet been chosen.

Borah will be the second senator selected by Idaho for this honor.

Merry-Go-Round.

JIMMY CROMWELL, millionaire minister to Canada, knew exactly what he was doing when he knocked the Nazis in a public speech. The ensuing headlines are bound to help his campaign for the U. S. senate from New Jersey. . . . Included in Jesse Jones' private list of telephone numbers is the name of Ella McLaren, a professional fortune teller. Wonder whether Jesse consults her regarding RFC loans or his chances for the presidency? . . . . If You Can Agree

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

"I AM a grocery clerk, out of a job," writes a correspondent, "with six in our family—two high school boys, two little girls, my wife and myself. We have never lived in the country, but we are good gardeners. Our garden has won prizes for three years. Now we have a chance to move, in April, to a farm, pretty well equipped, for a share. It is out of the way, with nothing modern, but the land is good, and we would be sure of our living. Could we succeed, and would you advise us to go?"

What do you mean, "succeed"? You will hardly become wealthy or famous on a farm, but wealth and fame, like poverty and crime, are by-products, anyhow. They are scarce in any profession. But as a simple, healthful, honest way of life, with much of joy and beauty and many elemental satisfactions, I claim the farm is unexcelled.

I see no reason why a grocery clerk could not become a farmer. Much would depend upon his adaptability and willingness to learn, and upon the attitude of his wife and family. To some women, the attempt to live successfully in an inconvenient farmhouse might be a challenge and a diversion. To others it would seem quite impossible—too much to ask. Farm women as a rule are neat and sociable. Many country homes are beautifully kept. In some ways a rural neighborhood is closer to each neighbor in it than a street in town, where strangers live side by side.

A novice, realizing his own lack of training and experience, sometimes does better than one longer on the job. There would be exhileration in all the members of a family taking up a new way of life together. They would share a bond of new experience, and if, this summer, they could acquire a flock of hens, a cow, a good garden and a shelf of canned food, they would be sure of an independent livelihood.

I note you say "our garden has won prizes." A family that is interested in gardening might easily widen their field of labor. Many city boys could become enthusastic farmers, given a little support and encouragement at home. The U. S. Department of Agriculture and your local experiment farm are available for all your questions.

Successful living anywhere depends upon co-operation with one's own family. If you can agree together to move to a farm, I would say "Try it." A farm, in April, is a wonderful place to be.

OPEN DRIVE TO DEFEAT 1-HOUSE LEGISLATURE

Farm Bureau Committees Call Plan One Giving Urbanites Legislative Control.

Stiff opposition to the proposal to re-district the state and set-up a one-house legislature had been launched today by the Ohio Farm Bureau's legislative committee, headed by John M. Hodson, chairman.

The one-house plan calling for fewer districts has already been adopted in other states and it is growing in popularity in Ohio.

"This proposal," Hodson asserted, "would result in concentrating the control of Ohio government in from six to eight metropolitan cities in the state, and that control would be exercised by a few powerful politicians. Petitions are now being circulated widely which call for popular referendum on these questions, no one should sign one if he is interested in maintaining a widespread voice in governmental activities."

The Farm Bureau spokesman contended that the welfare of the entire citizenry would always run proportional to the welfare of the farm population and that under the type of government proposed by the petition backers, agriculture "would be left out on a limb."

"The strong voice of farmer organization in the consideration of Ohio governmental policies," Hodson said, "has promoted and secured the enactment of many laws and regulations and institutions that have been of direct or indirect benefit to everybody; it has also succeeded in stopping the development of numerous laws and devices which would have been harmful to agricultural and also to the rest of the citizens in the municipalities."

Farm taxes have been reduced from 46 millions to 21 millions in the past ten years, Hodson said, and this has been accomplished by educational and legislative efforts to strong farm organization. These benefits have been passed on to all citizens in the form of reduced costs of farm products, he maintained, and much of the result 'would be destroyed by a legislature controlled by metropolitan political bosses."

Hodson urged farmers to rally to the ranks of farm bureau units in greater numbers than ever before in order to provide the "strength of numbers and funds necessary to defeat these proposed changes in Ohio government."

"The Ohio Farm Bureau opposes any propositions now being put forth," he added, 'to reapportion or redistrict the state. The present method of electing representatives provides for at least one from each county in the state which is the only system that will guarantee rural Ohio fair representation."

POTATO GROWERS CONFER FRIDAY

With a view to organizing a tri-county association and talking over the problems of potato producing and marketing, potato growers from Richland, Knox, and Morrow counties will meet at 8 p. m. Friday in the Lexington Grange hall.

If the three-county association is formed, a committeeman probably will be selected to represent the district in a state group working to improve potato marketing conditions, County Agent George B. Ganyard said.

My dear Mrs. Garner:
Permit me to join with others of your friends in extending hearty congratulations on the notable occasion of the one hundred fourth anniversary of your birth. I hope the day will bring you many pleasant reminiscences and that you will accept my very best wishes for your health and happiness.
Very sincerely yours,
Franklin D. Roosevelt

CENSUS TAKERS TO CALL FOR VARIETY OF FARM INFORMATION

Federal census takers are going to be inquisitive fellows when they start their farm enumeration April 1.

They will have census blanks containing 232 questions, covering virtually every phase of farm production and operations.

The enumerators will want to know the value of the farm, whether there is a mortgage on it and how much, the rate of interest on the mortgage debt, whether the farm operator earned anything last year from any other business than farming, how much he paid his hired help, whether he bought or sold through a cooperative organization, and the amount of taxes he paid in 1939.

Other questions will cover the acreage sown to every crop last year, the number of farm animals, chickens, eggs, and bees produced, acreage in fruit and vegetable crops, the number of trees and vines on the farm, hay tonnage, fur-bearing animals in captivity on the farm and the number of pelts taken in 1939, animals butchered for food, amount of wool shorn from sheep, and the milk and butter produced by cows and goats.

The farmer will be asked to estimate the amount of produce he and his family used in 1939 and how much he received from the sale of forest products.

The horticulturist will have to list the crops grown under glass, the trees, shrubs, and vines planted, and the value of flower and vegetable seeds planted.

Another section of the census query will cover the farm acreage in harvested crops, idle land, land used for pasture, and acres of woodland.

The farmer will be asked to tell how much he spent for fertilizer, seed, fuel for tractors, and for rent if he is a renter. If he farms on the shares, he will be asked how much the landlord furnished and what the renter's share was.

Unless the "farm" has more than three acres, however, and its products last year were valued at $250 or more, it will not be classed as a farm by the census man.

He will also pass up "fish farms," fish hatcheries, "oyster farms," and "frog farms" in the farm report.

HUNCH ON MARSH LANDS VALUABLE

WESTFIELD, Mass.— (U.P.) — Swamp lands aren't popular among most real estate buyers but Richard P. Boyle, city engineer, didn't care. A few months ago he bought a low-value bog, thinking there might be peat there.

Boyle began investigating and now finds himself the owner of a deep layer of peat, high in nitrogen content. Already he is marketing it for use by gardeners, nurserymen and home owners in gardens and on lawns.

Practical control of the internal parasites of sheep con not be obtained with the drugs now available if the animals are permitted to range woods pasture or other shaded areas

RICHLAND FARM LEADERS STUDY CONSERVATION

Meet Thursday to Draft Plans For Use of CCC Camp to Be Established in County.

Richland county farm organization leaders, soil conservation committeemen, and vocational agricultural instructors will meet at the courthouse at 8 p. m. Thursday to discuss a land conservation program and the use of CCC camp in conservation work.

A CCC soil conservation camp was approved recently for Richland county and if sufficient federal funds are available the camp will be established this summer south of Mansfield.

H. E. Hecker, assistant soil conservationist in the Mt. Vernon area, and County Agent George B. Ganyard will speak at the meeting Thursday night.

A movie film showing the damage from soil erosion in a nearby county will be shown. The meeting will be in the common pleas courtroom.

"The meeting will have a two-fold purpose," Ganyard said. "First, we hope to give a group of county farm leaders a view of some of the problems involved in making a living on the land and at the same time maintain that land in a state of productivity.

"Second, we want to discuss the problem of the Soil Conservation service, how it works, how it uses the CCC camp, and how the farmers of Richland county can make the best use of the facilities of the camp in assisting with the soil conservation problem."

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, MARCH 26, 1940.

In all fairness to Confucius, it should be said that he is being frequently misquoted.

Rather awkward, after remarking: "There's a woman driver for you," to have it turn out to be a man at the wheel.

Hotel men in Maine will devote March 30 to paying tribute to the man who originated the hole in doughnuts—and ask all dunkers to join in observance of the occasion.

To Study Traffic Problems

SERIOUS study of Mansfield's present traffic conditions appears to be an essential preliminary to whatever improvement can be brought about through the interested co-operation of the citizens' traffic committee, of which Lewis F. Hartman has been chosen as general chairman by Mayor Locke.

Except for those few who have already devoted considerable study to the subject, the local traffic situation is more a matter of hastily formed impressions than of the complete understanding that will be needed before practicable plans for improvement can be intelligently recommended.

The extent to which Mansfield streets are devoted to motor traffic, local and transient, naturally suggests more policing than is possible with the present limited personnel in the police department, as enforcement is a generally recognized essential to safety.

Continuance of education is also important—as is realized by even casual observation of the dumbness displayed by some motorists who are obviously unfamiliar with traffic regulations or even the simplest rules of safe driving.

But the third of the "e" requirements for safety—engineering—is one to which little attention has thus far been given in Mansfield, and the one that will probably have a place in whatever survey is made in seeking a solution of present problems.

The growing volume of heavy truck traffic through Mansfield has considerably aggravated an already difficult situation, and some way of detouring this traffic AROUND the city instead of over main thoroughfares will eventually have to be provided if there is to be any hope of making Mansfield streets adequate for the legitimate traffic load they are now required to carry and which may be expected to increase from year to year.

Other Ohio cities are also strongly stressing the importance of greater traffic safety and are taking steps in that direction. Whatever can be accomplished in Mansfield, through co-operation of officials and citizens, will be well worthwhile—as convenience of the motoring public merits consideration, in addition to the safety element.

No Help From Cosmic Ray

ANYBODY who was thinking of hitching his power equipment to a cosmic ray had better start looking for another source of energy. Dr. Robert A. Millikan, one of the country's cosmic ray authorities, came back recently from a research trip in equatorial regions with the sad news that such rays would never be effectively harnessed for practical use.

Cosmic rays are perhaps 1,000 times as powerful as the strongest radiation produced by atomic explosions in laboratories, but they hardly ever get to the earth's surface with their full strength and could not be relied on for a steady flow of energy.

It seems these rays have to buck too much interference as they approach the earth. The earth itself is a huge magnet and its atmosphere is alive with magnetic lines running between the north and south poles.

Active and Passive Evils

AMERICANS who are fearful that every book published in England is subtle propaganda to get this country into the European war should read "What Has Happened to Europe" by Geoffrey T. Garratt. The author is a member of England's Liberal party. He has been newspaper correspondent, master of a boys' school, civil servant in India, cavalryman in Mesopotamia during the World war, and adviser to the Ethiopian minister in London. He is for the English people and heartily supports the Allied cause, but he is against "Chamberlainism" and the blunders of conservatives in Europe in the years preceding the present war.

"No part of Europe, no group of individuals, can be wholly free from responsibility for the cruel and bestial actions which have disgraced the last few years," he writes frankly. "In England and France, and to a lesser extent in the other democracies, there have been political subterfuges and evasions, sins of omission, divided loyalties, the falsifying of news, and the shoddy internationalism of financiers.

"These have directly encouraged aggression and brutality. The shape of European politics in the last decade is due to the interlocking of two evil things, one active, the other passive."

The active evil is the aggression of the dictators. The passive evil is the acquiescence in it of the democracies so long as they are not the ones immediately threatened. History may show that the passive group did as much damage as the other to the various treaties and guarantees of protection, co-operation and non-aggression signed between 1919 and 1938.

Fiction Standards Changed

CARL J. WEBER, professor of English at Colby college and author of a biography of Thomas Hardy, tells us that Hardy's work was once considered rude and barbarous. Reviewers used to warn readers against him. Another English professor once called one of Hardy's novels "most objectionable."

Today a reader, turning to Hardy from the novels of Steinbeck, Caldwell, Faulkner, and other contemporary writers, is likely to wonder what those earlier reviewers meant by "rude," "barbarous" and "objectionable."

And that leads to another thought: What will fiction be like fifty years from now when today's "hardboiled" writers appear as mild and decorous as Hardy now seems?

Mild Profanity Sanctioned

A CHICAGO JUDGE, Joseph J. Drucker, contributes to civilization by laying down the law for the use of profanity in bowling.

The bowler has a right to cuss when he fails to get a strike, but this must be gentle and addressed to the ball—not to the other players. And when he lets off steam in a genteel way, players on the same team or in the next alley who happen to overhear it must not take it personally.

And now, maybe quite soon, some enlightened jurist may perform a similar service for baseball, tennis, golf and pinochle.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Mr. Elliott Nugent, famed Ohio State university alumnus, old classmate of Jim Thurber, old friend of Bob Benchley, ex-news reporter, actor, film director, co-author of "The Male Animal"—a Broadway hit—lay billowed and pillowed in his wife's boudoir at 520 East 86th street, an aura of benignancy playing about his thin, blond head.

A number of things had conspired to bring about this salutrious state of contentment. (a) he had a slight cold; (b) he had just read in the papers that he and his wife, the former Norma Lee, were debating a divorce; and (c) the comedy which he and Thurber had co-written on trains and in west coast hotels and on ships passing through the Panama Canal had just been sold to the movies for $150,000.

That's a lot of money, $150,000. That's a funny thing to debate, a divorce. That's a good excuse to take a rest, a cold.

Let's debate that divorce first. "Norma and I were flattered," Nugent confessed, "because nobody ever said that about us before. We've been married 14 years, we've raised three kids, and for years we've lived in Hollywood. But nobody ever rumored that the Nugents had pffft! We'd about made up our minds that we were nobodies, because almost everybody who is important gets rumored about. But now that we have finally 'arrived' we're very pleased, and we hope all our friends read it, too."

* * *

NOW the play. When you co-write a play you blend your ideas with the ideas of someone else. You work them around until they take form.

"Jim had an idea to start with which sounded pretty good to me, and I had a few ideas too, and we finally got together. We talked it over and sketched the thing out last February, but it wasn't until much later that we got down to work. You can't co-write a comedy when one of you is in New York and the other is in Hollywood. Finally Thurber and his wife came out and we got going.

"We wrote different parts, and then re-wrote each other's stuff. Some of it he wrote on trains to and from New York. Some of it I wrote on the coast. Jim even took a lot of notes and wrote some of it on the ship coming back through the Panama Canal. That's the way it was. All the pieces seemed to fit. Then we tried it out on the coast."

Q: "But can you tell anything about a coast tryout—whether it will go across in New York?"

A: "Sometimes you can, and we were pretty confident that we had a good property. We thought if we had a good cast, that we'd do all right, but of course no one can anticipate a smash hit, or even dream that you can sell the movies for $150,000. Pretty good, eh!"

* * *

WHEN Nugent is felling pretty satisfied he accompanies his remarks with a quick, sly sort of gee-I'm-happy wink. This wink takes the place of a smile, because Nugent is no cheshire cat. He doesn't grin too much. This wink is just his way of expressing exuberance.

After reading this over I find that I haven't explained that cold. It wasn't a cold, actually. Nugent just thought he might get a cold, and as it was an off day, with no matinee, and as his own quarters were occupied by Herbert S. Duffy, a pal of old Columbus, O., days who is house-guesting this week, he decided to seek out a quiet comfortable haven where he could relax and enjoy the sunlight streaming in through the south windows.

So he chose the boudoir of Mrs. Nugent, all reports of imminent separation and divorce notwithstanding.

THERE'S GRATITUDE FOR YOU

Oppose Consolidation Proposals

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

THERE is considerable talk in congress of the necessity for consolidation of government. I've heard the same thing urged at headquarters of the United States Chamber of Commerce and by officials of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Every time governmental consolidation is urged the conclusion generally is drawn that the movement is in the direction of power—something Fascistic or Nazi-istic.

I think this consolidation talk is different from that.

The dope is this:

In years long gone by, government had to be pretty local.

For instance, I was brought up in a town which was the governmental seat at the northwestern corner of one of Iowa's northwestern counties. To get from the southeastern corner of that county to its northwestern corner was a trip comparable to a trip from Chicago. The roads, in bad weather, were a foot deep in mud. One night I'd been to a hamlet 16 miles from home to get the news of a cyclone. Ready to return, I couldn't find a livery man willing to risk a team on those highways, and had to walk, along the railroad right-of-way. Today I could do it in 30 minutes by bus, or less in a taxicab.

In "them times," then, a county seat was central.

Mere County Commissioners.

Members of our board of county commissioners rated locally, politically, as members of a state legislature rate now in comparison with congressmen.

If our municipal "coppers" had encountered a state policeman, they'd have incarcerated him. Police authority ended at the township's edge. After that, it was the sheriff's—then, between sheriff and sheriff.

Now, our consolidation advocates want to consolidate counties.

Their reasoning is that eight or ten counties can be "skwushed" into one county per group—sheriffs, commissioners, treasurers and judges, consolidated.

Their eight-or-ten-combined county seat, it alleged, in this day of automobiles, will be as convenient as the one-county-seat used to be in the era of the mud road and lumber wagon.

The consolidation would cut out a lot of salaries, certainly.

That's one of the objections to it. The local office-holders don't like the idea.

How Far Should It Go?

The question also arises:

How far should consolidation go?

States-righters have their voice in the matter.

They haven't any objection to intra-state consolidation, but they certainly draw the line on any federal interference.

The relief question enters into the equation.

Relief's half federal; half local. The locality wants to boss it politically. The federal government wants to boss it, being contributary.

The federal government wants consolidation. It's more convenient and undoubtedly cheaper. Local government objects; it gets political "gravy" out of its allowances of Uncle Sam's money, passed through its hands.

The more it's split up, in all probability, the more it costs.

The conclusion seems to be:

Let the subdivisions consolidate.

The more they consolidate the more economical they're likely to be—because otherwise their home folk will yell.

The trouble with congress is:

It's too remote. The taxpayers don't know what it's doing, as they know only about their local board of aldermen and county supervisors.

Health and Diet

Mastery Over Rectal Disorders.

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

AMONG the causes listed for constipation are rectal diseases, and they are the reason for much other ill health also. Most forms of rectal diseases can nowadays be treated in the physician's office. The diseases suitable for this form of treatment are hemorrhoids (by injection) fissure, fistula (of some types), inflamed crypts, pruritus or itching.

I know of no type of surgery that seems to me to have made more advances concerning the comfort of the patient than rectal surgery in recent years. Nor do I know any branch of surgery in which the personal training of the surgeon results in any more rewards to the patient. The trained rectal surgeon has learned to be gentle, and with the aid of his electric-lighted instruments, to survey the whole field of operation thoroughly before he begins.

Anesthesia Aids.

The invention of various types of local anaesthesia has allowed a great many procedures to be carried out in the surgeon's office, thus saving the expense, as well as the inconvenience and discomfort, of hospitals, and interfering very little with the pursuit of the patient's ordinary activities and work.

Hemorrhoids, or piles, especially of the external type, can now be removed by local anesthesia and injection in the office. What is called the "acute bleeding pile" is simply one in which the blood has become clotted. Many people walk around with these agonizing conditions which can be rapidly and safely alleviated. Internal hemorrhoids can be treated by injection.

Fissure Painful.

Another painful and annoying condition easily remedied is fissure or ulcer. The skin involved is about the most sensitive of any place in the body, and what seems like an extremely large and painful condition is really very small and very easily relieved.

Infected crypts are very annoying, giving rise to itching and burning and a feeling of uneasiness, but can be very satisfactorily cared for in office treatment.

Itching, or pruritus ani, is one of the most annoying and embarrassing of human ailments. Very frequently it is simply due to hemorrhoids or cryptitis of the rectum and can be relieved by proper operation. Local treatments are usually of little value.

When cases have resisted all other forms of treatment, it is possible to inject the skin with a solution which produces a prolonged anesthetic action. Its application may give complete relief.

Timely Editorial

Plain Clothes Traffic Men.

Judge James A. Bowman's ruling that a plainclothes member of the police force can make arrests for traffic violations touches an important—and tender—point of motoring ethics.

When is it permissible to break traffic laws?

The 100 percenter hesitates, then says, "When there's nothing in sight and it can't possibly hurt anybody."

The rest probably wouldn't care to say so, but their idea is that it's permissible to break traffic laws when there's no policeman in sight. It's sad but true that there are more drivers of this kind than there are of the other two.

Best thing that could happen to traffic law enforcement would be for a red hot rumor to get into circulation that every man in an ordinary business suit, overcoat and hat is really a traffic policeman waiting—and itching—for a chance to make a pinch. It would be better than adding 100 men to the traffic squad.—Canton Repository.

A new commandment I give unto you. That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another.—John 13.34.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—It is no longer any secret that Jim Farley is definitely lined up with the anti-third termers. But not generally known is the fact that Jim actually plans a show-down with Roosevelt regarding the president's own plans, and this showdown will come before the Democratic convention at Chicago.

Jim made up his mind to do this about the same time he issued his recent Massachusetts bombshell labeled, "My name will be presented to the national convention."

Democratic insiders had known for some time that Farley was cold to the idea of the president running again, but he side-stepped a positive commitment. He always declared that he was confident the president had no intention to seek re-election.

In the past month, with Roosevelt slates being entered in various states under obvious White House guidance, Farley's aloofness has hardened to out-and-out hostility. From being on the fence he has slid over definitely to the anti-third term group.

Not only will Jim aggressively fight a third term, but he is prepared to denounce it publicly. However, he will not talk out until he has had a show-down with Roosevelt, at which time he will insist on a categoric "yes" or "no" answer.

If there is no reply, or an unsatisfactory one, then Jim is prepared to express his opposition publicly. He is aware that such a statement would play into the hands of the GOP and that it may mean finale for him politically, but he feels that he owes it to the Democratic party and the country frankly to state his views.

The Massachusetts statement was Farley's opening gun in his plan to smoke out Roosevelt. From now on, regardless of their close ties and their still warm personal friendship (as far as Farley is concerned), they are two rival candidates.

Note — Farley was absolutely sincere when he declared that he was "in no combination with anyone." Recent reports that he was secretly allied with Garner are unfounded. Privately Jim thinks Garner is getting nowhere fast. His own personal ticket is Hull and Farley.

Congressman's Costs.

AN OLD Capitol Hill axiom is that you can get a congressman to talk about almost anything but the size of his bankroll. He'll orate at great length about "the way the taxpayer's money is being squandered, but ask him how much of it he himself has managed to salt away during his years on the public payroll, and you've got a speechless congressman.

One exception to this rule is lanky, tobacco-chewing Bob Secrest of Ohio. When he announced his candidacy for re-election for a fifth term the other day, Secrest accompanied the statement with an itemized account of his personal financial affairs. A public official, he told his constituents, is not entitled to privacy regarding his personal wealth, "for by this means the public can best measure his honesty in office."

"I have drawn $10,000 a year in my eight years in congress," reported Secrest, "yet though I live as I always did before, I have saved only $9,000, chiefly in insurance and realty. On the other hand, I owe $4,200. Four campaigns have taken thousands of dollars of my salary.

"In addition, income tax on my salary has been over $2,000, my telephone bills have cost me more than $5,000, chiefly long distance calls to help individuals and communities in my district. In my first five years in Washington, I spent $4,000 for rent and I have spent thousands of dollars on rail and auto transportation, over and above my mileage allowance, and have worn out five new cars.

"Further, several thousand dollars have gone for charity to individuals and worthy organizations in my district. That's the record. As long as I am in congress I feel that the people are entitled to know where my money goes and what I own."

McNutt Income Taxes.

THE McNutt income tax investigation has boiled down to the problem of smoking out big, jovial Bowman ("Bo") Elder, ex-treasurer of the American Legion and finance man for the McNutt forces in Indiana.

Elder was the man who received the funds from the Two Per Cent club (by which state employes gave the party 2 per cent of their salary), and he also knew—or the treasury thinks he knew—where these funds were were disbursed.

It is the claim of the McNutt group that while large funds were received, they were all paid out for political purposes, and for this reason no income taxes were payable. In fact, McNutt, himself, then a state employe, did not even file an income tax return.

However, the treasury insists on getting details on how the funds were spent and Bo Elder is the key to this puzzle. They are waiting for him to talk, and he, in turn, says he will not be made the scapegoat.

Meanwhile, McNutt forces, jittery over delay and anxious to push the campaign of their candidate, demand that the treasury either exonerate or indict. A break in the present impasse is coming soon.

Note — "Tuck" Stanley, McNutt's discouraged publicity expert, has resigned.

THE State of Idaho plans to enshrine the memory of its late great Senator William E. Borah under the lofty dome of the National Capitol, where he served for more than 30 years.

The state will fill its quota of statues in Statuary Hall (the original chamber of the house of representatives, where each state is allowed to place two statues). The sculptor has not yet been chosen.

Borah will be the second senator selected by Idaho for this honor.

If You Can Agree

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

"I AM a grocery clerk, out of a job," writes a correspondent, "with six in our family—two high school boys, two little girls, my wife and myself. We have never lived in the country, but we are good gardeners. Our garden has won prizes for three years. Now we have a chance to move, in April, to a farm, pretty well equipped, for a share. It is out of the way, with nothing modern, but the land is good, and we would be sure of our living. Could we succeed, and would you advise us to go?"

What do you mean, "succeed"? You will hardly become wealthy or famous on a farm, but wealth and fame, like poverty and crime, are by-products, anyhow. They are scarce in any profession. But as a simple, healthful, honest way of life, with much of joy and beauty and many elemental satisfactions, I claim the farm is unexcelled.

I see no reason why a grocery clerk could not become a farmer. Much would depend upon his adaptability and willingness to learn, and upon the attitude of his wife and family. To some women, the attempt to live successfully in an inconvenient farmhouse might be a challenge and a diversion. To others it would seem quite impossible—too much to ask. Farm women as a rule are neat and sociable. Many country homes are beautifully kept. In some ways a rural neighborhood is closer to each neighbor in it than a street in town, where strangers live side by side.

A novice, realizing his own lack of training and experience, sometimes does better than one longer on the job. There would be exhileration in all the members of a family taking up a new way of life together. They would share a bond of new experience, and if, this summer, they could acquire a flock of hens, a cow, a good garden and a shelf of canned food, they would be sure of an independent livelihood.

I note you say "our garden has won prizes." A family that is interested in gardening might easily widen their field of labor. Many city boys could become enthusastic farmers, given a little support and encouragement at home. The U. S. Department of Agriculture and your local experiment farm are available for all your questions.

Successful living anywhere depends upon co-operation with one's own family. If you can agree together to move to a farm, I would say "Try it." A farm, in April, is a wonderful place to be.

OPEN DRIVE TO DEFEAT 1-HOUSE LEGISLATURE

Farm Bureau Committees Call Plan One Giving Urbanites Legislative Control.

Stiff opposition to the proposal to re-district the state and set-up a one-house legislature had been launched today by the Ohio Farm Bureau's legislative committee, headed by John M. Hodson, chairman.

The one-house plan calling for fewer districts has already been adopted in other states and it is growing in popularity in Ohio.

"This proposal," Hodson asserted, "would result in concentrating the control of Ohio government in from six to eight metropolitan cities in the state, and that control would be exercised by a few powerful politicians. Petitions are now being circulated widely which call for popular referendum on these questions, no one should sign one if he is interested in maintaining a widespread voice in governmental activities."

The Farm Bureau spokesman contended that the welfare of the entire citizenry would always run proportional to the welfare of the farm population and that under the type of government proposed by the petition backers, agriculture "would be left out on a limb."

"The strong voice of farmer organization in the consideration of Ohio governmental policies," Hodson said, "has promoted and secured the enactment of many laws and regulations and institutions that have been of direct or indirect benefit to everybody; it has also succeeded in stopping the development of numerous laws and devices which would have been harmful to agricultural and also to the rest of the citizens in the municipalities."

Farm taxes have been reduced from 46 millions to 21 millions in the past ten years, Hodson said, and this has been accomplished by educational and legislative efforts to strong farm organization. These benefits have been passed on to all citizens in the form of reduced costs of farm products, he maintained, and much of the result 'would be destroyed by a legislature controlled by metropolitan political bosses."

Hodson urged farmers to rally to the ranks of farm bureau units in greater numbers than ever before in order to provide the "strength of numbers and funds necessary to defeat these proposed changes in Ohio government."

"The Ohio Farm Bureau opposes any propositions now being put forth," he added, 'to reapportion or redistrict the state. The present method of electing representatives provides for at least one from each county in the state which is the only system that will guarantee rural Ohio fair representation."

POTATO GROWERS CONFER FRIDAY

With a view to organizing a tri-county association and talking over the problems of potato producing and marketing, potato growers from Richland, Knox, and Morrow counties will meet at 8 p. m. Friday in the Lexington Grange hall.

If the three-county association is formed, a committeeman probably will be selected to represent the district in a state group working to improve potato marketing conditions. County Agent George B. Ganyard said.

CENSUS TAKERS TO CALL FOR VARIETY OF FARM INFORMATION

Federal census takers are going to be inquisitive fellows when they start their farm enumeration April 1.

They will have census blanks containing 232 questions, covering virtually every phase of farm production and operations.

The enumerators will want to know the value of the farm, whether there is a mortgage on it and how much, the rate of interest on the mortgage debt, whether the farm operator earned anything last year from any other business than farming, how much he paid his hired help, whether he bought or sold through a cooperative organization, and the amount of taxes he paid in 1939.

Other questions will cover the acreage sown to every crop last year, the number of farm animals, chickens, eggs, and bees produced, acreage in fruit and vegetable crops, the number of trees and vines on the farm, hay tonnage, fur-bearing animals in captivity on the farm and the number of pelts taken in 1939, animals butchered for food, amount of wool shorn from sheep, and the milk and butter produced by cows and goats.

The farmer will be asked to estimate the amount of produce he and his family used in 1939 and how much he received from the sale of forest products.

The horticulturist will have to list the crops grown under glass, the trees, shrubs, and vines planted, and the value of flower and vegetable seeds planted.

Another section of the census query will cover the farm acreage in harvested crops, idle land, land used for pasture, and acres of woodland.

The farmer will be asked to tell how much he spent for fertilizer, seed, fuel for tractors, and for rent if he is a renter. If he farms on the shares, he will be asked how much the landlord furnished and what the renter's share was.

Unless the "farm" has more than three acres, however, and its products last year were valued at $250 or more, it will not be classed as a farm by the census man.

He will also pass up "fish farms," fish hatcheries, "oyster farms," and "frog farms" in the farm report.

HUNCH ON MARSH LANDS VALUABLE

WESTFIELD, Mass.— (U.P.) — Swamp lands aren't popular among most real estate buyers but Richard P. Boyle, city engineer, didn't care. A few months ago he bought a low-value bog, thinking there might be peat there.

Boyle began investigating and now finds himself the owner of a deep layer of peat, high in nitrogen content. Already he is marketing it for use by gardeners, nurserymen and home owners in gardens and on lawns.

Practical control of the internal parasites of sheep con not be obtained with the drugs now available if the animals are permitted to range woods pasture or other shaded areas

RICHLAND FARM LEADERS STUDY CONSERVATION

Meet Thursday to Draft Plans For Use of CCC Camp to Be Established in County.

Richland county farm organization leaders, soil conservation committeemen, and vocational agricultural instructors will meet at the courthouse at 8 p. m. Thursday to discuss a land conservation program and the use of CCC camp in conservation work.

A CCC soil conservation camp was approved recently for Richland county and if sufficient federal funds are available the camp will be established this summer south of Mansfield.

H. E. Hecker, assistant soil conservationist in the Mt. Vernon area, and County Agent George B. Ganyard will speak at the meeting Thursday night.

A movie film showing the damage from soil erosion in a nearby county will be shown. The meeting will be in the common pleas courtroom.

"The meeting will have a two-fold purpose," Ganyard said. "First, we hope to give a group of county farm leaders a view of some of the problems involved in making a living on the land and at the same time maintain that land in a state of productivity.

"Second, we want to discuss the problem of the Soil Conservation service, how it works, how it uses the CCC camp, and how the farmers of Richland county can make the best use of the facilities of the camp in assisting with the soil conservation problem."

'SPRING COLD' CAUSES DAMAGE TO FARM CROPS

Retards Farmers' Plowing and Hits Wheat Crop; Fruit Escapes So Far.

The severe cold of the past week which dropped temperatures near zero further retarded spring farm work and probably caused heavy damage to the county's wheat crop, County Agent George B. Ganyard said yesterday.

"Fortunately, there was no warm weather preceding the cold wave and fruit buds and other crops easily damaged by cold are not very far advanced," the county agent asserted.

The protecting cover of snow which saved the wheat from the sub-zero cold several weeks ago is gone and damage to the tender plants undoubtedly was heavy during the past few days although it is too early to determine the extent of the losses, Ganyard pointed out.

The lack of snow also permitted the ground to freeze deeper, making it impossible for farmers to start their plowing, already two or three weeks late.

"So far, I haven't heard of a single farmer in the county who has done any plowing, while usually by this time much of the spring plowing is done," Ganyard said.

A number of farmers are expected to rely on tractors to help them catch up with their work. State agriculture engineers estimate that Ohioans own 87,500 tractors, an increase of 10,000 in the past year. They said a farmer can plow an acre in an hour and a half with a tractor while it requires about four and half hours to plow an acre with horses.

The wet weather, however, probably will give horses the advantage this year, because they can work in much softer ground than heavier tractors.

Farm specialists explained that wet plowing will be satisfactory for a few weeks, since alternate freezing and thawing will break up sod and clods.

Most of the county's fruit crop except peaches escaped damage from the severe winter, it was believed. Peach trees, unable to withstand extreme cold, suffered heavily in January when the mercury fell below zero for several days. Because there has been no warm weather, other fruit trees have not advanced far enough to be damaged to any extent.

Winter losses of bees in the county are heavier than usual this year and bee experts said farmers may suffer greater losses due to the reduced pollination of legumes, fruits and vegetable crops by bees.

Dr. W. E. Dunham, extension apiarist at Ohio State university, urged bee producers to replace their winter-killed bees with "package bees" from the south. He said a two or three pound package of bees with a queen can be installed easily in the hive where enough comb, honey, and pollen usually remains in the spring to get the new crop of bees off to a good start.

A bulletin on the use of "package bees" in replacing winter-killed colonies may be obtained free at the county agent's office.

WHAT'S WRONG?

Radios Work But There's No Contact With Headquarters.

DENVER— (AP) —Radio transmitting trouble brought Officer Leon Ballageer of the auto patrol to the city repair shop. Three other patrol cars were ahead of him.

"We just can't contact the radio control tower," the crews all reported.

Repairman Russell Barnett inspected each transmitting set without finding a flaw. As a last resort, before placing the blame on the central broadcasting-receiving station, he decided to inspect the antennae on each car.

Someone had stolen them!

Poor plowing jobs with tractor outfits usually are caused by the operator forgetting the plow is the piece of equipment which must be watched if the soil is to be turned properly.

GOT JOB AS MAYOR AS SOON AS GRADUATED FROM HIGH SCHOOL

WHITESBURG, Ky. — At 23, and after two years as "the youngest mayor in the United States," Bill—just plain Bill—Collins admits "reluctantly" that politics is a pretty grave undertaking for a young man.

"There have been many occasions since my tenure of office that I should have welcomed a few more years of experience," he says.

Mayor Bill, who clings to his nickname on the city's official stationery and in the records of his office, was elected November 7, 1937, when he was 21. He defeated his former school teacher, 50 years his senior.

He's rather proud of his claim to "youngest mayor" honors and of the "pioneering stock" from which came many of the 1,800 residents of this county seat town in the southeastern Kentucky mountain country.

Bill has a lot of definite ideas about running Whitesburg's government. Basically, however, he works on the theory that "a true democracy must start down at the people's level if it is expected to thrive throughout an entire nation."

Bill took office soon after graduation from high school and, so far, hasn't got around to going to college. But he hopes to enter a university at the expiration of his four-year term.

RAT SURVIVES 32,000 VOLTS

Tail Short-Circuits Wires, Part of Spokane In Darkness.

SPOKANE, Wash.—(AP)—Bing Crosby's brother Ted, who works for a Spokane water power company, decided yesterday he had found the toughest rat that ever lived—it absorbed a 32,000-volt shock through its tail and merely lost its temper.

A large portion of Spokane was darkened by a sudden power failure and Crosby said the company trouble shooters who investigated found the rat in a sub-station with its tail burned from contact with a "hot" circuit.

"Two disconnecting switches were blown out, insulators were broken, switch blades were pitted and a porcelain switch base was blistered," Crosby reported.

"The rate was mad. The trouble shooters had to kill him before they could go to work."

STORAGE SPACE FOR 450,000 BUSHELS PROVIDED IN TANKS

One of the largest current additions to Ohio's industrial program is this soybean mill now being built by Swift & Company at Fostoria. San D. Hollett, manager of the new mill, is directing the purchase of soybeans throughout Ohio and northern Indiana. As soon as plant operations begin late this spring he will direct the sale of soybean oil meal in addition.

Storage space of more than 450,000 bushels of beans at one time, or 900,000 a season, will be provided in the reinforced concrete cylindrical tanks shown at left in this picture. Each tank is 24 feet in diameter and 106 feet high. The workhouse in center, also of reinforced concrete, includes equipment for cleaning and drying beans. Facilities will be available for unloading both carload and truck shipments of beans, and for loading out carloads and truckloads of soybean oil meal.

The mill will have a crushing capacity of between 2,600 and 2,800 bushels daily. Three carloads of soybean oil meal will be produced every day for sale as a protein concentrate for feeding meat animals, dairy cattle, and poultry. A tank car of oil will be available every third day for shipment to the company's vegetable oil refineries in New Jersey, North Carolina, Georgia, Florida, and other eastern and southeastern cities.

Ohio, now ranking fourth among soybean-producing states, is showing a steady development in this field. From 1927 to 1936, inclusive, the state devoted an average of 171,000 acres to soybeans for all purposes. The total had jumped to 445,000 acres in 1938 and the 1939 figure was estimated at 668,000,of which 341,000 acres were for beans. Illinois, largest producer, devoted an estimated 2,542,000 acres to soybeans for all purposes, 1,795,000 of them for beans.

Walter Hack, Medina county, increased the hay ration supplied to his cows 65 per cent, decreased their grain ration 62 per cent, and obtained an average production of 405 pounds of butterfat per cow, as compared with an average of 414 pounds of butterfat before the change in feeding methods.

Winter-Damaged Roads Curb Construction Program

COUNTY FUNDS TO BE USED UP BY REPAIRS

Townships as Well Use Most of Money to Condition Roads Damaged by Cold.

The severe winter caused so much damage to Richland county's roads that the county and townships will be forced to spend most of their time and money making repairs this spring and summer, County Engineer Howard Sword said following recent conferences with township trustees.

"Many of the county's stone and gravel roads are in bad condition and some of the hard-surfaced routes are broken up in places," the engineer said.

"The fact that revenues are shrinking, especially in light of new relief problems, will cause this office to recommend only necessary and hold-over projects for new construction in 1940," he added.

Sword went ahead to propose construction programs on an alternate year basis so as to conserve road funds and keep damaged roads in repair.

The severe weather was not entirely to blame for the break-down of county roads, he explained, since many of the secondary roads were built hurriedly several years ago and the proper attention was not paid to materials and building methods.

"Roads were built as cheaply as possible, because cheapness per mile in cost allowed more mileage to be constructed when the county was in its campaign to get the farmers out of the mud," Sword asserted.

Built Cheap Roads.

"It was reasoned that for every mile of higher type roads 10 or 15 miles of cheap roads could be constructed and many more rural people would be served. The same compromise called for narrow widths, the minimum construction of bridges, and no study of subsoil conditions. The life of such roads could scarcely be more than eight years."

Sword estimated that four-fifths of the county's 375 miles of low-cost roads are worn out and must be re-built as finances permit and most of the 50 miles of hard-surfaced roads will have to be replaced in another five years.

"The bridge problem is different," he continued. "With federal aid in WPA money permanent structures have been built in the past five years to keep pace with the deterioration of bridges, but there are still 400 structures in need of immediate attention. If the same program is continued in the next few years, this problem will not continue to be of major importance."

One Pair of Eyes Serves 3 Brothers In Work On Farm

SHAWNEE, Okla. —(U.P.)— One pair of eyes serves the three Smith brothers, successful farmers who live near Shawnee, Okla.

Larry, 55, can see. He aids his brothers, Plus, 50, and Claude, 57, both of whom have been blind since birth.

The blind men do routine farm chores, even saw and chop wood. They milk the cows, gather eggs, wash dishes, build fires, water stock, and, sometimes, even cook meals.

The three brothers made a good living on their 70-acre farm. They live in a five-room bungalow. They own glass-fronted chicken houses and two large cattle barns.

Besides the 70 acres they own, Larry owns 40 acres more and all three rent another 80-acre tract which they farm.

The Smiths came to this territory July 4, 1895, before Oklahoma was a state, and homesteaded on their land northwest of Shawnee. They have lived there ever since, without a mortgage or delinquency in taxes against their property.

Larry recalls that the brothers and their father, used to raise a large cotton crop each year. Plus and Claude would be directed at the start of the cotton rows, and they would pick the field. Then, Larry and the father would follow, gathering the bools the blind brothers had missed.

"You'd be surprised how clean they picked their rows," said Larry.

FARMER LUNGES AT CAR, STOPS IT

TWIN VALLEY, Minn—(U.P.)— To Carl Lucken, Red River Valley farmer, an all-star team is a brace of Percherons and interference has something to do with the Federal government.

Yet Lucken, according to the Twin Valley hot stove league, executed the most spectacular—and hardest block—of the 1939 season.

Lucken, his automobile gone suddenly balkey, got out to crank it. The motor started, the car bore down on Lucken, who found himself suddenly in danger of being crushed between the car and a substantial stone milkhouse.

His back literally to the wall, Lucken crouched, then plunged head-on into the oncoming car.

There was a crash as the car, motor and all, stopped dead in its tracks.

Garagemen said repairs to the radiator grill would run about $12.

DWARF FRUIT TREES STILL IN DEMAND, SPECIALIST DECLARES

Present public interest in dwarf fruit trees is only a recurrence of a desire that has lived for hundreds of years, but satisfaction of the desire appears more probable now, according to F. H. Beach, specialist in horticulture, Ohio State university.

Dwarf fruit trees attract attention because people want trees which they can grow in city lots or small plots of ground and which can be protected from insects and diseases with simple equipment. Another desirable feature of the dwarfs is that they bear fruit within a short time after being set.

Beach says there are two methods of dwarfing fruit trees. Confinement of the roots of ordinary varities within a small walled area or clipping the roots to reduce their feeding area will limit any tree's growth. Trus dwarfing is obtained by grafting ordinary apple scions upon dwarf root systems.

Trials with dwarf apples in past decades were not especially promising. The available dwarfs were not uniform in growth, some supposedly dwarf trees turned out to be average in size. The lack of uniformity was caused by variations in the roots available for grafting.

Considerable of this difficulty with roots has been eliminated by work done in England and in New York, and it is possible now to get trees which are uniformly dwarfed. Apple trees at the New York experiment station frequently bear fruit the year they are set and always have borne the second year.

The Ohio State extension specialist says fruit is frequently better in quality and more highly colored than the same variety borne on trees of average size.

The dwarf trees have more open tops so the sunlight has a better chance to reach and color the fruit.

Beach believes apples and pears have considerable promise for those who want to have fruit trees in yards or gardens. The bloom often is as beautiful as that produced by ornamental shrubs and the fruit provides color not obtainable otherwise.

Dwarf trees, however, are subject to attacks by all insects and diseases that injure commercial orchards, and gardners should be prepared to learn how to control these troubles if they plant dwarf trees. The dwarfs can be made to assume most any desired form by training them against walls or upon lattices.

The stage of growth of pasture grasses not the date on the calendar should determine when livestock is to be turned out. Jumping the season a few days to let the stock eat washy grass may cut many days off the other end of the pasture season besides reducing the total amount of forage produced all through the summer.

CREDIT HYBRID SEED FOR BOOST IN PRODUCTION

Farm Officials Declare Corn Yield Increased 15 Bushels In Ohio in 10 Years.

The increasing use of hybrid seed and improved farming methods boosted Ohio's corn production from 36.5 bushels per acre 10 years ago to 50 bushels per acre last year, U. S. department of agriculture figures show.

Also aided by ideal growing conditions last year, Ohio's corn yield was 21.4 bushels per acre above the average for the entire United States. Production in the state in 1938 totaled 171,250,000 bushels, compared with 156,992,000 in 1938 and 132,297,000 bushels for the 10-year average.

The larger crop last year was produced on 187,000 acres less than was planted in corn 10 years ago, proving that the type of seed and cultivation methods were responsible.

Crop experts, forecasting that virtually every farmer in the state will be using hybrid corn in a few years, warned farmers that hybrid varieties draw heavily on the nitrogen, phosphoric acid, and potash in the soil which must be replenished through proper crop rotation and the use of lime and fertilizer.

Hybrid corn requires more plant food to produce the sturdier stalks, more expensive root systems, and fully developed ears ,it was pointed out.

Members of the Middle West Soil Improvement committee explained that "to make certain that the supply of nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash is sufficient for the crop's requirements, growers can consult with their county agents or send samples of their soil for analysis to the state agricultural college or experiment station."

Motorists Given Weather Reports In Massachusetts

BOSTON — (U.P.) — Hereafter Massachusetts residents and motorists will learn of threatening weather conditions through the cooperation of the state police and the Boston weather bureau.

As result of the paralyzing of traffic Feb. 14 by a blizzard, Gov. Levertt Saltonstall approved a plan by which the police teletypewriter system would be used to warn of approaching storms and to give road conditions.

Under the plan, the weather bureau will—as far in advance as possible—advise the state police of impending weather disturbances. This information then will be sent by teletypewriter to the 22 police barracks, the registry of motor vehicle, the state public works department and the states of New Hampshire, Rhode Island and connecticut.

All state troopers will report the progress of the storm to their stations and the information will be relayed to the Boston headquarters.

TRAP WORMS

County Agent Gives Tips on How to Save Shade Trees.

Early in the spring is the time to apply sticky bands to elms and other shade trees to trap canker worms that develop into moths and destroy the tree's foliage, County Agent George B. Ganyard advised today.

"The female moths are wingless and can be trapped easily on sticky bands around the tree trunk," he said. "Tree tanglefoot is the proper material to use and it can be applied directly to the bark with a narrow paddle."

The first moths will be ascending the tree trunks as soon as the nights become warm, making it necessary to trap the insects in March and April, Ganyard said.

DROP WALLACE'S FARM PROPOSAL

House Committee to Drive For O. K. of $923,000,000 Supply Bill.

WASHINGTON — The house agriculture committee has dropped Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's certificate plan and processing tax proposals and will drive for passage of the $923,000,000 farm supply bill, which exceeds budget estimates by $202,000,000, it has been disclosed.

"There probably will be no further hearings by the committee on the certificate plan," said Chairman Marvin Jones (D) Tex., of the committee. "I doubt of anything will be done about it.

"I don't see any reason to raise taxes to finance farm payments when the whole thing is related to the tariff. As a matter of simple justice, the farmers should have an offset to the tariff. The question of taxation is a national question, not a farm question."

Wallace proposed his certificate plan as a substitute for processing taxes after President Roosevelt demanded that congress levy taxes to finance parity payments to farmers.

The senate, however, added $212,000,000 to the agriculture supply bill for parity payments in defiance of budget recommendations, and without considering additional taxes.

The house sends the $923,000,000 bill to conference with the senate today. Leaders of the "economy bloc" planned a stiff fight, before final action, to defeat the parity payment appropriations.

Pigs have more cupboard space than cattle. The first animals can store in their bodies 35 per cent of the gross energy in the feed they consume but cattle can store only 10 per cent of the energy.

SUMMER TIME SLOWLY EDGES IN ON WINTER

Season Between Frosts Grows Two or Three Weeks in Past 80 Years, U. S. Says.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Winters are becoming shorter and summers longer, according to records kept by the U. S. Weather bureau for the past 80 years.

The "growing season"—the time between the last spring frost and the first fall frost—has increased by from two to three weeks during that period, J. B. Kincer, chief of the bureau's climatology division, said.

In the Middle-Atlantic area around Washington the "growing season" has increased from an average of 188 days in the 20-year period, ended in 1906, to 206 days for a similar period, ended in 1938, Kincer said.

The report discloses the astonishing migration northward of the "growing season" since 1860. It has move 225 miles north. It now is as long in the vicinity of Indianapolis, Ind., as it was in 1857 around Nashville, Tenn.

Crop Movement North.

The "growing season" extends roughly from April to October. On that basis, "corn belts" have been designated on the basis of the time required for crops to grow. The cotton belt, the corn belt and the spring wheat belt all have been pushed northward.

It has been possible for example, to grow cotton 225 miles farther north than it was during the past 20 years than it was in the 20 years between 1860 and 1880. Similarly, other crops requiring a longer warm, growing season can be grown farther north.

Average weather around Washington for the past decade has been approximately that of extreme southern Virginia 50 years ago. Similarly, Southern Virginia now has the climate the section more than 150 miles south had in the 1880-1890 decade.

Crops have not necessarily followed the change in climate. The crops planted are determined in part by traditional planting practices of farmers and the local facilities built up over many years for this processing.

Change Began in 1875

The upward trend in average temparatures began in about 1875. Since 1898 they have been above the 100-year average and have steadily increased. Weather bureau officials declined to "guess" whether the abnormally severe winter just passed may mark the turning point in the trend.

Kincer cited as examples of the abnormal warmth that has been evident for the past 20 years: Portland, Ore., 17 out of 20 years warmer than normal, warmest year on record, 1921; Omaha, Neb., 15 warmer than normal, warmest on record, 1931; Washington, 17 warmer than normal, warmest on record, 1921.

One significant effect of this "warm-cycle"—weather bureau officials are not convinced that it is anything more than a weather cycle—has been the enormous saving in the fuel bill for the area. It has resulted in saving of millions of tons of coal and other fuel, Kincer said.

Reports from Europe, Asia, Africa and other parts of the globe indicate that the increase in average temperatures has been worldwide, although not as great in some other parts as in the United States. Western Europe has experienced about the same change as this country, however.

The U. S. Bureau of Fisheries repeorts that there are 314,500,000 pike perch in Ohio waters.

Ambulance Attendant Becomes a Patient as Well.

BELLVILLE, Tex.—(AP)—W. E. Thomas, ambulance attendant, was sitting beside a patient in an ambulance speeding to a hospital.

The door rolled open and Thomas rolled out. He bounced along the highway for about 40 feet, rolled over a culvert into a ditch, suffered a broken jaw and lost many teeth. He was helped back into the ambulance and rushed to the hospital with the original patient.

Six Dead, 100 Injured as Blizzard Hits Northern N. Y.

HUGE DRIFTS BLOCK ROADS, MAROON MANY

Milk Hauled by Sleigh as Autos Are Buried by Snow; Plane Forced Down.

SYRACUSE, N. Y. — (U.P.) — The upper half of New York was buried today under the heaviest snow in years, with hundreds of families marooned.

The blizzard, described as the worst since the memorable one of 1888, had reached its full fury last night when a 45-mile wind piled up huge drifts, blocking virtually all roads and causing six deaths and more than 100 injuries.

Syracuse, Utica and Rochester, with a combined population of 640,000, were snow-bound. Horse-drawn sleighs were used to haul milk into the cities. Police were stationed at their outskirts to prevent anyone trying to leave by automobile. Radio stations, at the request of police, repeatedly warned their listeners against travel.

On the highways, hundreds of automobiles were completely buried in snow. Occupants sought shelter in farm houses.

The storm's victims included a 14-year-old girl who died near Newport from a ruptured appendix, unable to reach a hospital for an operation because of the snow drifts; three persons killed by automobiles; and Orin Fortune, 64, Saranac Lake, and Walter B. Couch, 52, Rochester, who died of over-exertion walking in the snow. Most of the 100 injured were traffic victims.

An army flier, Lieut. Joseph Stenglein, of Brooks Field, Tex., was forced down in Cortland county but escaped injury when his plane nosed over. Trains ran behind snow plows. There was no other means of travel.

Main roads into Warsaw were blocked and snow plows were unable to make progress through the giant drifts. Nearly 500 automobiles were stalled near Syracuse alone. The wind was abating at Syracuse this morning and authorities hoped to have main highways open later in the day.

Roads leading to Batavia were blocked. Only one snowplow remained in service. An undertaker vainly sought state police aid to reach an isolated region where two persons were reported dead.

Snow flurries, but rising temperatures, were predicted fo rtoday.

Save Furniture As Fire Destroys Home Near Shiloh

SHILOH—Fire almost completely destroyed a six-room frame house four miles south of here early this morning but members of the family escaped, managing to save all their clothing and most of their furniture.

The house was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Omar Harnly, a son, Richard, and a daughter, Margaret, the latter a Shiloh school teacher.

It was believed the fire started from an overheated kitchen stove. It was discovered by the elder Harnly, who had risen, started a fire in the stove and started his morning chores.

He roused other members of the family who quckly dressed and then removed as many articles of clothing and furniture from the house as they could.

The Shiloh fire department was called, and fought the blaze, pumping water from the nearby Blackfork creek.

Although the house was almost destroyed, most of the loss was reported covered by insurance.

The body was removed to the Wappner funeral home where services will be held at 3:30 p. m. in charge of Rev. C. L. Kern. Burial will be in Mansfield cemetery.

Unmindful of the chilly weather, John Pearson, 611 Springmill street, swayed in the breeze 120 feet above Central park this morning while he gave the park flagpole a new coat of aluminum paint. Former member of a daring steeplejack troupe, Pearson climbed into his rope "swing" and started up the pole with his paint bucket, commenting: "In an hour and 40 minutes I'll either be down here with the job done or out there in the street with the work unfinished." He painted the Liberty park pole yesterday and planned to do the Prospect and North Lake park poles this afternoon.

Detective Lee J. Remy is seriously considering going back to school. Not because he feels the urge to study but because he wants to master foreign languages so he can be understood. The veteran police officer had difficulty making a woman understand that he was a policeman the other day when he flashed his badge and asked to talk to someone in the house. I made her understand that I wasn't soliciting funds, but I had to yell 'police' and point to the badge before she finally caught on," he related.

This week pupils of the Mansfield public schools are enjoying their annual spring vacation, but that doesn't make it different from any other week for members of the Senior high school band who are going to school every morning just as usual. Throughout this week the band is holding a two-hour daily rehearsal in the auditorium, beginning at 9 a. m. and continuing until 11 a. m. The band voted almost unanimously to hold rehearsals during the vacation, J. Merton Holcombe, director, said.

READY FOR RUSH

Wolfe and Aids Await Belated Returns of Taxpayers.

County Auditor Norman L. Wolfe and six assistants were preparing today for the biggest rush of taxpayers the county has had in a long time as the deadline for paying personal taxes nears.

With only five more days to go, only half of the county's personal property owners have filed returns and the auditor estimated that hundreds of property owners will swarm into his office to beat the deadline and escape the penalty for late payment.

Personal tax receipts so far amount to $34,215. A few more than half of the 5,000 property owners have filed their returns.

Treasurer John E. Kolb said real estate taxes amounting to $360,321 have been collected, approximately two-thirds of the tax charge for the first half of the year. Books will be open for payment until April 10.

LEAVES 2 NOTES, THEN ENDS LIFE

Chesterville Man Found Dead In Hotel Here, Blames Financial Troubles.

Ascribing his act to "financial and other troubles," James G. Bradrick, 58, of Chesterville, ended his life last night in a North Main street hotel after reminiscing with a fellow guest on the "good old days."

Bradrick registered at the hotel yesterday afternoon, and his body, fully clothed except for a coat, was found on the bed in his room early this morning by the proprietor.

Coroner Hugh Winbigler said, he had been dead about six hours and that death was due to a self-administered poison which the man purchased yesterday afternoon at a Mansfield drug store.

Bradrick was formerly employed as a lineman for the Mansfield Telephone company and in recent years had sold peanuts and popcorn at night from a little stand in the entrance of the Martin Hardware company. He spent some time last night talking to George Tait, who occupied a room across the hall from him, and reminiscing about former years, Tait told police.

He had left a call for 6 a. m. today and when the hotel proprietor went to call him, he found the key in the outside of the door and the lights on. Two penciled notes were turned over to police. One said: "Notify my brother, M. F. Bradrick, Fredericktown," and the other said "Financial and other troubles are the cause of this act."

Bradrick was born in Knox county June 1, 1881. He is survived by his wife; one son, Kenneth of Fredericktown; a daughter, Mrs. Louis McMahon of Mt. Vernon; his brother mentioned in the note, and three sisters, Mrs. Leota Brinkerhoff, Bellville; Mrs. May Cornell, Fredericktown, and Miss Mary Bradrick, Columbus.

The body was removed to the Finefrock funeral home pending funeral arrangements.

ADMINISTRATION SEES VICTORY IN TRADE PROGRAM CONTROVERSY

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The Roosevelt administration, engaged in a close contest over extending its reciprocal trade program, won the support today of senators whom it tried unsuccessfully to defeat in 1938.

Three of them—Senators Gillette (D-Iowa), George (D-Ga) and Smith (D-SC)—told reporters that they would vote for the bill.

The fourth, Senator Tydings (D-MD), remained uncommitted, but friends speculated that he probably would be found in the administration camp when voting time came.

Politicians generally agreed that one reason why the senators found it easy to support the New Deal on this issue was that Secretary Hull, principal advocate of the trade program, took no part in the 1938 primary battles.

Gillette, whose opponent at that time was endorsed by Harry L. Hopkins, said he favored extension of the trade program as the only way to recapture lost markets for surplus farm products.

Senator George asserted that extension of the program was essential to help beat down world barriers to trade. He said he did not advocate entirely free trade but favored "liberal" exchange of goods among nations.

From Smith came a contention that the trade agreements were clearly constitutional under the authority of congress over commerce. Congress delegated its authority to the president, he said, within limitations which made the grant of power far less than that given the interstate commerce commission.

Republican and Democratic opponents of the extension bill, which already has been approved by the house, contend that the senate should pass on each one.

LETTERS GO OUT

Mansfielders Invited to Renew Civic Music Memberships.

Letters were mailed today to the 1,050 members of the Mansfield Civic Music association, inviting them to renew their memberships before the annual drive opens next Monday.

Dr. A. O. Fonkalsrud, president of the association, said that if members would send their dues to the campaign office, in the Ohio Fuel Gas company building before Monday, it would save them from being personally solicited by campaign workers.

Letters were also sent to the churches and clubs which purchased student memberships last year and presented them to worthy music students.

While the drive opens on Monday, the day of the Gladys Swarthout concert here, the annual campaign dinner will not be held until Tuesday night. It will be given in the John Simpson Junior high school dining room at 6:30 p. m. Mrs. W. E. Wygant is chairman of the dinner.

ELECTION TODAY TESTS POLICIES OF INCUMBENTS

Blizzard Expected to Reduce Voting for Members of Parliament.

OTTAWA — (AP) — Conduct of the war against Germany was the central issue in voting today as Canada's Liberal party government staked its existence on the first national parliamentary election since Oct. 14, 1935.

The only parties which could command a majority of the 245 seats in the house of commons unaided are the Liberals, led by Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King, and a national government group headed by Dr. Robert J. Manion, Conservative leader.

A week-end blizzard which blocked many roads was expected to reduce the number of today's voters, previously estimated at about 5,000,000 out of approximately 6,500,000 eligible. The liberals have received support in the past in the rural sections most likely to be affected by the weather.

While the main campaign issue was conduct of the war, other issues relating to war and post-war problems were debated in the eight-week campaign.

Mackenzie King dissolved parliament Jan. 25 and called the election in another to critics of his war policy.

Spokesmen of the national government group attacked the administration's record of preparation for and actual conduct of the war, contending it was slow and inefficient.

Liberal spokesmen contended the administration compared very favorably with that during the first six months of the World war, when a conservative government was in power.

Both major parties expressed opposition to conscription, proposing to carry on the system of voluntary enlistments under which some 90,000 Canadians have joined the colors.

Members of the armed forces in Canada and England completed balloting Saturday but their totals will not be known until April 1, or later.

On dissolution, the Liberals held 176 seats and the Conservatives 39. The house of commons term is for five years, unless sooner dissolved. Senate members are summoned for life in the governor-general.

The Voice of BROADWAY

—By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

Excerpts From Miss Midnight's Diary.

From the look of Broadway these evenings, I would say that Hollywood is a place where motion picture people go when they are not in New York, which is seldom.

The bistros are full of Zanuck starlets. Academy award winners, producers, directors, and other citizens normally found strolling the Sunset Strip. . . . Rosalind Russell is skimming around town driving the girls daffy with her wonderful millinery; she dined at Bill Bertolotti's Tuesday night with Mary Brian and a group of Beverley Hills expatriates, and the little lace hat she wore had necks stretching to unbelievable lengths over the room.

Simone Simon enlivens the scenery around and about, accompanied alternately by her mother, Mrs. Monique Simon, and her beau, Freddie de Cordova (the difference being that she doesn't hold hands with her mother), and the night places are sprinkled with such cinema characters as Joe Schenck, Bert Wheeler and Jimmie Fidler.

* * *

At Leon and Eddie's Sunday night romance was blossoming sweetly, and all over the place. Georgie Jessel and Lois Andrew, the Peleas and Melisande of the Times Square area, were reciting sonnets to each other and lightly discussing the elopement possibilities of Elkton, Md., So far as I could gather, they concluded the difference in their ages was too great, so they would not marry until this week, when Lois would be a year older.

The Jimmie Fidlers (Mrs. Fidler is petite and brunette and looks like a Russell Patterson drawing, which she used to be) executed a conga, a rhumba, and even what my eyes took to be a shag, but they retired gracefully for the Boomps-a-Daisy number and left the field to Bert Wheeler, Lois DeFee, and Hal LeRoy, who was the evening's guest of honor.

Milton Berle turned up with mama and a couple of new gags. "The electric company shut off our lights," he confided. "Mom made a mistake and sent the monthly check to Mickey Rooney!"

* * *

Over at La Conga things were very merry. The writhing conga line had for its component parts such divers dancers as Mr. and Mrs. John Garfield, Betty Grable, the DeMarcos, Ted Husing, and Geraldine Spreckles. . . .

Sylvia Sidney rhumba'd with her husband, Luther Adler, and Elaine Barrie, in animated conversation with her spouse, John Barrymore, got so gay with her gestures she almost singed off his moustache with the lighted end of her cigaret.

Michael Whalen, at a ringside table, was surrounded by beauty—Helen Mack, Olympe Bradna, and Mary Healy; while not far away, with another belle, was Miss Healy's former beau, Franchot Tone.

Diosa Costello, who usually can be found at LaConga when she's not shaking the foundations of the Imperial theater, could be glimpsed at Colbert's assassinating a thick sizzling steak, while her 46th St. neighbor, Betty Grable, exhibited a duplicate lack of regard for her waistline. Betty, who is usually the prettiest girl in the room no matter what room it is, drew admiring once-overs from Joe Schenck, Paul ("Fight For Life") De Kruif, and Maestro Meyer Davis, who was waving, instead of a baton, a fork.

* * *

There were chills, shivers and screams at the Barrymore Theater where George Abbott's mystery, "Goodbye in the Night" opened—the shivers and screams from the audience, the chills, chiefly from the critics.

Jules Glaezer, fortified with a very pretty girl, managed to sit through the homicidal proceedings without turning a hair, although his seat was in the first row, and Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart, extremely soignee in black lace and pearls, looked as cool as an ice cream soda. Julie Haydon wore a blue dress and her hair in a barrette, like Alice in Wonderland, and it seemed to me she shivered a little.

Afterward the William Rhinelander Stewarts entertained George Abbott and Marcy Wescott at La Martinique, all dncing and looking as gay as if they'd never heard of a maniac, a dark house, a scream in the night, or a dead man in a straightjacket.

* * *

An autograph hunter would have been in heaven at the Algonquin Supper club. Roland Young, Francis Lederer was paying all kinds of attention to Margo, and the best tables were filled with Judith Anderson, George S. Kaufman, Carl Van Vechten, Margalo Gilmore, Oscar Levant, Monty Woolly and Burgess Meredith.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Easter. Resurrection. Life renewed.

In Hollywood, every actor knows that his career can die and still find a personal Easter.

All that it needs is one good picture.

If any actor doubts it, he has but to look at the list of box-office leaders. He has but to look, more briefly, at the death and resurrection of one Mickey Rooney.

Mickey is No. 1 today. Once Mickey was, professionally and legally, a "corpse." One day he was Mickey McGuire, a flourishing kid actor in comedy shorts, and the next day, by court decree, he was no longer Mickey McGuire. He was Joe Yule, jr., forbidden by law to use the screen name he had adopted. Out of that "death" came Mickey Rooney. But the new name meant about as much as Joe Yule, jr.—nothing.

Mickey Rooney got into "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and he was good. He got into other pictures and he was good. He got into the Hardy Family pictures and he was sensational. "Love Finds Andy Hardy" was the final mark of his "resurrection."

* * *

Tyrone Power has yet to know a lull in his career. He is a darling of the fans (who count), although the critics (who don't) have had unkind things to say. When Tyrone gets his, finally, and Zanuck finds somebody new, young Tyrone has but to remember that his own father was a successful actor long before he became an old man.

Clark Gable never "died," but his imminent fade-out was predicted freely. But it happened one night that "It Happened One Night" And now he is set.

Shirley Temple, the commentators have been moaning, is through. Didn't she slip last year from first place to fourth or fifth? Think of it! There are three or four other actors who draw more people to the box-office than she does, so Shirley is "through."

Absurd of course. Shirley needs a good picture, and she'll get it, sooner or later.

* * *

Robert Taylor hit the skids last year. When they counted the tenbests. Bob wasn't around. But, today, the boy is standing on "Waterloo Bridge," in the good company of Vivien Leigh.

You can look over the lists of the stars and you'll see that most of them have had their downs as well as ups. Claudette Colbert sagged with "Made of Salem" and "Zaza" and redeemed herself at "Midnight." Jackie Cooper was bowed out of the picture and refused to stay out. Ditto Freddie Bartholomew. Ditto Garbo. How often has that girl been "washed up"? Ditto the director Lubitsch. And W. C. Fields and Mae West, Warner Baxter and Ronald Colman, Edward G. Robinson.

* * *

Adolphe Menjou was "finished" long ago. See "A bill of Divorcement" as latest proof of his many "resurrections." One studio "finished" Deanna Durbin before she started.

But "resurrection" of a career takes time. The former stars who now are playing extra roles all bank on that—those who still care. They're remembering that yesterday's withered rose can be today's Easter lily. And Marie Dressler is their patron saint.

MANSFIELD COUPLE WEDDED IN CLEVELAND

Quiet Ceremony Performed Easter Sunday Morning for Miss Kerr, Mr. Millikin In Presence of Families.

THE CALVARY LUTHERAN CHURCH in East Cleveland was the scene of the wedding of Miss Marjorie Louise Kerr and Howard Perry Millikin at 8 o'clock on Easter morning. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Kerr, 588 South Diamond street, and Mr. Millikin's parents are Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Millikin, 5 Park drive.

Rev. Harold B. Ernsberger, pastor of the church, read the ceremony before an altar decorated with Easter lilies and early spring flowers. Only members of the immediate families were in attendance at the wedding.

The bride was attired in a street-length dress of navy blue crepe trimmed in white. Her accessories were dusty pink, and gardenias formed her shoulder corsage. She wore a gold necklace, a gift from the bridegroom, and carried the handkerchief her mother carried when she was married.

Miss Gladys Kerr was her sister's only attendant, and she wore a navy crepe with pink accessories for the occasion. James Hart served at the best man. Mr. and Mrs. Kerr took the wedding party to a Cleveland restaurant for breakfast following the ceremony.

After April 1, the couple will reside on Bissman court. Mrs. Millkin attended Hiram college after her graduation from Mansfield Senior high school. She was a member of Olive Branch sorority on the campus. She is a graduate of Mansfield Business Training school and an assistant librarian at the Public Library. Mr. Millikin, who also was graduated from Mansfield senior high school, is employed at the Hartman Electric and Manufacturing company.

Rev. Nicola Back To Read Service For Mansfielders

Rev. Milton G. Nicola, who went to a pastorate at Kent only a few weeks ago, returned to Mansfield Sunday evening to read the nuptial ceremony for Miss Joyce Becks Felthauser, daughter of Dr. Flo A. Morris, 158 West Third street, and Graydon Kuppinger, son of Mr. and Mrs C. F. Kuppinger, Springmill road

The couple was married at 8 p. m. at the Grace Episcopal church in an open ceremony. The bride was attired in a powder blue dress with a beige coat and hat, and a corsage of gardenias.
